MAYOR RECALLS KIRCHEIS, LATER RENAMES HIM

RESIGNS FORMER JOB IN MEANTIME

Action of Former Mayor Kiel in Naming First Man to Hold the Position Cited as Precedent.

William T. Kircheis, Mayor Miller's selection for chairman of the Efficiency Board, was on the job today, in charge of the board's office in the Municipal Courts Building.

One of the first matters of business that came to him was a communication from the Mayor, revoking his appointment as a member of the board. This was a formality, to remove a doubt which had been raised as to his eligibility under the charter. Kircheis, on receiving the Mayor's communication, sent in a formal resignation of the position he has held in the Water Department, as supervisor of assessments. Soon after this the Mayor again appointed him a member of the Efficiency Board.

Charter Provision in Matter.

The charter says that "no person holding any salaried public office shall be eligible to appointment" to the Efficiency Board. This provision, it is held, is not violated by the second appointment of Kircheis, as he had ceased to hold his previous city position.

It is recalled that the first chairman of the Efficiency Board, Thomas H. Rogers, was Mayor Kiel's secretary before his appointment to the board.

The charter gives the board power to choose its chairman. Mayor Miller has asked the other members of the Board, Thomas H. Sorlace and Fred Renick, to make Kircheis chairman in place of Charles Hertenstein, who resigned Saturday. Hertenstein, in his letter of resignation, charged the Mayor with attempting to use the Efficiency Board to build up a personal machine. The board controls the appointment of more than 3000 city employes in the classified service.

Only Reply to Hertenstein.

The Mayor's only reply to Hertenstein's letter, as told Saturday, was the appointment of Kircheis, a hasty procedure which proved to involve a legal defect, now believed to have been remedied.

A special meeting of the board has been called for this afternoon, and it was expected that Mayor Miller's wishes would prevail, and Kircheis would be made chairman. As Kircheis could vote for himself, only the combined opposition of the others could keep him from being named.

A large picture of Hertenstein still hung in the chairman's office today. Because of the severely critical tone of his letter to Mayor Miller, it is likely that the picture will be removed from the wall, and will be preserved, if at all, in the archives of the board.

COOLIDGE ABATES $6,137,552 DUE ON THE BOXER INDEMNITY

Balance Owed by Chinese Government Remitted Under Congressional Authority.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The balance of $6,137,552, due the United States from the Chinese government on Boxer indemnity payments, has been remitted by President Coolidge under congressional authority granted in May, 1924.

The funds are to be employed for educational and similar purposes under direction of a board appointed by the Chinese Government and composed of Chinese and American citizens.

Mr. Coolidge's executive order was signed July 16 just when the American Government was seeking to impress upon other governments the feasibility of its plan for relieving some of the embarrassing elements in the present Chinese situation. News of the President's action is expected here to have a beneficial effect in further demonstrating to the Chinese people the friendship of Washington.

The original amount due the United States was more than $24,000,000, but the total was reduced by act of Congress to $13,655,492 in 1924.

The board which will administer the educational fund already has been organized and is ready to begin its work.

Former Mayor Noonan Had Late Adolphus Busch Mark Requests With a Pin.

Mayor Miller's use of dots before names sent to the Efficiency Board, to indicate the degree of his political interest in applicants for city position, recalls to older politicians an incident of the term of E. A. Noonan as Mayor.

Noonan and the late Adolphus Busch were warm friends. Job hunters were continually requesting Busch to write letters to Mayor Noonan in their behalf. Busch wrote letters for nearly everyone making the request, but privately informed Noonan that the letters didn't mean so much.

Noonan thought he saw a way out. "If you're really interested," he told Busch, "just stick a pin through the eagle on your letterhead."

Politicians learned of the device and often saw to it that when letters from Busch in behalf of friends in whom they, themselves, were interested reached Noonan, they bore the potent pin marks.

There are still men in the city hall who are said to have originally made the city payroll through this trick. Noonan was Mayor from 1889 to 1893.

MAYOR TO LEAVE TOMORROW ON VACATION AUTO TOUR

Will Visit in Chicago and Detroit —Alderman Neumann to Be Acting Mayor.

Mayor Miller plans to leave tomorrow on a vacation automobile tour. With Mrs. Miller, he will drive to Chicago and Detroit, and probably farther East, but has not determined whether he will visit New York. He said today that he planned to observe municipal conditions and study methods of city government in other cities. He will be away three or four weeks.

As President Neun of the Board of Aldermen is out of the city, it appears that Alderman Charles A. Neumann of the Twelfth Ward, vice-chairman of the board, will be acting mayor, at least until Neun's return.

BEARS FIGHT FOR GOLF BALL

Field Marshal Haig's Party Witness Strange Scene in Fairway.

By the Associated Press.

JASPER, Alberta, July 20. — A hazard not included among those planned for the Jasper Park golf course was encountered by the party of Field Marshal Earl Haig when two bears staged a battle royal for a golf ball on the fairway. Lieutenant-Colonel F. F. Clarke, one of the Earl's party, drove off from the first tee yesterday, the ball landing 150 feet away.

A bear suddenly appeared and galloped after the ball. A second bear gave chase and disputed the nine points of the law held by bruin No. 1. In the fight for the possession of the ball it was torn to shreds while the golfers looked on from a discreet distance.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Uncle Sam has a best seller. "Baking in the Home," first issued in July, 1917, by the Department of Agriculture, is still going strong. It has been revised for the third time and will soon be ready for distribution again. During the period of 1917 to 1924 more than 2,125,000 copies of the bulletin were broadcast to the women of the country. Baking day, the department believes, is still an important institution in the American home.

FALLS ASLEEP AT WHEEL OF AUTO; FATALLY HURT

Roy Kampf, 27 years old, of 2137A South Jefferson avenue, fell asleep for a moment while driving on Lemay Ferry road at 4:30 a. m. today and his automobile crashed into a guard fence, resulting in internal injuries from which he died two hours later at the city hospital.

A railing torn loose from the fence by the impact of the collision broke the windshield of Kampf's machine and struck him in the stomach.

A nearby farmer, attracted to the scene of the accident, which occurred about six miles south of the city limits, notified Constable Knight of Carondelet Township, who had Kampf conveyed to the hospital. Kampf told Constable Knight that he was driving at a moderate speed when he fell asleep.

At the time of the accident Kampf was on his way to a road construction camp in Jefferson County, where he was employed as a master mechanic. He is survived by his widow and two children, one of whom is but a week old.

Woman and Daughter Hurt in Collision of Automobiles.

Mrs. Adeline Greer, 50 years old, of 3447 California avenue, suffered several fractured ribs and internal injuries, and her daughter, Margaret, 18, was cut and bruised at 6 a. m. yesterday when an automobile in which they were riding collided with another machine at Miami street and Pennsylvania avenue. The machine in which they were riding was driven by another daughter, Frances, 17. William Schmidt of 3747 Newport avenue was driving the other automobile.

FRANCE READY FOR GREAT OFFENSIVE IN MOROCCO

Movement to Be Launched if Riffian Leader Rejects Peace Terms of Franco-Spanish Agents.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 20.—France will start a great military offensive in Morocco against Abd-el-Krim, Premier Painleve said today, if the Riffian leader refuses peace terms offered him by semiofficial Franco-Spanish agents.

The Premier told today's Cabinet meeting that Abd-el-Krim now knows the terms upon which he can have peace with France and Spain in Morocco and that the Riffian leader can open negotiations immediately if he desires.

The French front is now so strengthened, the Premier said, that there is no longer justification for any uneasiness. The first sections of a new division of reinforcements have reached Morocco and will be moved immediately.

The War Ministry today formally denied reports that the French will use gas against Abd-El-Krim's invading Riffians in Morocco.

69.3 GALLONS OF 'GAS' PER CAPITA U. S. CONSUMPTION

1,856,491 Automobiles Turned Out in America in First 6 Months of 1925.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Gasoline consumption is far more extensive in the United States than anywhere else in the world.

A Commerce Department survey, made public today, showed per capita consumption in this country to have reached 69.3 gallons a year, while England was second with an average of only 11.6 gallons. One year's consumption in China would not keep the automobiles of the United States running eight hours. To supply the demand, American production of gasoline was increased from 1,500,000,000 gallons in 1914 to 9,000,000,000 gallons in 1924.

The United States acounted for 79 per cent of the world's total consumption last year, while at the same time exporting $160,000,000 worth of the commodity.

The Commerce Department also announced that in June the United States produced 350,557 passenger automobiles and 36,096 automobile trucks, compared with 214,322 and 28,117, respectively, in June last year.

For the first six months of 1925, the United States has turned out 1,856,491 passenger cars, against 1,744,534 in the same period last year and 226,059 trucks, against 192,322.

182 OFFICIALS INVOLVED IN DRY GRAFT CHARGES

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 20-22 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Officials of the Government here and members of Congress are interested in reports to the Department of Justice that the prohibition act has resulted in wholesale crookedness and the breaking down of moral standards among law officers in many communities throughout the nation. They realized that there was corruption, but not to such extent as the actual facts show.

Capt. W. H. Stayton, head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, conducted an investigation on his own hook long before Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews was sworn in as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. Up to a month ago he reported 182 law officers engaged in the enforcement of the prohibition act had faced criminal action for alleged overt acts, graft, corruption and conspiracy to defeat the provisions of the dry law which they were supposed to enforce.

Bootlegging and Bribery.

"In an effort to show the type of men engaged in the attempted enforcement of prohibition," Capt. Stayton said, "we gathered information from all parts of the country. Charges against the law officers ranged from manslaughter to hijacking. Many were charged with bootlegging, dishonesty and bribery. Those involved were Federal prohibition agents, policemen, Constables, detectives and Sheriffs.

"Cities and towns from which reports were gathered and the number of officials facing charges, follows: Rochester, 5; New York City, 45; Philadelphia, 43; Morris County, N. J., 11; Atlantic City, 2; Cleveland, 3; Trenton, N. J., 5; Scituate, Mass., 4; San Francisco, 2; Lewisburg, W. Va., 5; Chicago, 5; Boston, 2; Denver, 13; Erie, Pa., 2; Hazelton, Pa., 3 Columbus, O., 12; Seattle, 4; Syracuse, 2; Los Angeles, 3; Norfolk, 3; Toledo, 2; Riverhead, N. Y., 2; Martin's Ferry, O., 3; and one each in Danville, Va., Jonesboro, Ark., Elk Point, S. D., Wewoka, Ok., Louisville, Hoboken, Steubenville, O., St. Paul, Baltimore, Tucson and Atlantic Highland, N. J."

The cases listed above do not include those started in June, when 54 officers were arrested or faced court on charges of drunkenness, corruption, manslaughter or assault.

300 HOMELESS IN STILL BLAST

New York Tenement Partly Wrecked by Explosion.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The explosion of a still in an East 100th street tenement building yesterday made 300 persons homeless and probably fatally injured one man. The building was partly wrecked.

The still was being operated in the basement by Giuseppe Auguliaro, police said. Auguliaro was hurled from the basement to the street and probably fatally injured.

FORMER CHICAGO BROKER JUMPS 15 STORIES TO DEATH

E. W. Wagner Leaps From Building in Central Business District —Firm Failed for Millions.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 20.—E. W. Wagner, formerly one of the biggest figures in the Chicago grain trade, whose firm failed for millions a few years ago, jumped to death from the fifteenth story of the Westminster Building in the central business district.

The body dropped to the roof of the Monroe Theater. Wagner was about 60 years old, and lived on Lake Shore drive.

Wagner, who spent the day in the country yesterday and apparently was in good spirits, phoned his wife a few minutes before he leaped from the window, saying "the market is rather low and things look bad."

He had been in poor health for some time.

Wagner's personal fortune, at one time estimated at about $8,000,000, was said to have been largely used in meeting liabilities of his firm in the net loss of about $2,500,000.

THE BOWDOIN AND PEARY CONVERSE BY RADIOPHONE

MacMillan Party Members Talk at Will Between Two Ships at Hopedale.

CHICAGO, July 20.—Eskimos like the radio. A message from Lieutenant-Commander R. E. McDonald Jr., with the MacMillan Navy-Geographic Society Arctic expedition now off Labrador, to an amateur here, H. H. Roemer, made public today, gave an account of radio communication.

For the first time members of the expedition can talk by radiophone at will without prearranged schedules between the ship Bowdoin and the S. S. Peary. Commander MacMillan is on the Bowdoin and McDonald is on the Peary.

"We are using phone exclusively between the Bowdoin and the Peary," the message said.

All that was necessary was to go to the transmitter, built like a telephone, start the generators and call out, "This is WAP calling WNP." A loud speaker receives the voice on the Bowdoin. Reinartz, the radio expert, gets the call, goes to the transmitter and answers. McDonald asks for MacMillan; who goes to the transmitter and the two men converse.

"This evening we entertained the Eskimos at Hopedale by letting them talk to their friends across the harbor on the Bowdoin," McDonald's message added.

'DEVIL'S GRIP' GERM REPORTED DISCOVERED

Bacteriologist Finds Parasite Believed to Be Cause of Painful Disease.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—Announcement that Dr. James C. Small, bacteriologist of the Philadelphia General Hospital, has discovered a parasite in the blood of patients affected by "devil's grip," which he believes to be the cause of that disease, has been made by Director Wilmer Krusen of the Department of Public Health.

"Devil's grip" is a comparatively new disease. It usually occurs in epidemic form and, while not often fatal, it is very painful.

"The parasite discovered by Dr. Small," said Dr. Krusen, "has been named the plasmodium pleurodynia. The discovery, however, is awaiting confirmation, depending upon re-examination of patients when the disease again visits this community. The present announcement is a preliminary one."

Director Krusen said the disease usually makes its appearance in the late summer. Regarding its clinical aspects, he said, its onset is sudden and is attended with paroxysms of excruciating chest pains, simulating pleurisy, and is accompanied by fever and painful shallow respiration.

"The paroxysms of pain," the director added, "last from four to 24 hours, and tend to recur with lessened severity after intervals of one to two days of relative comfort. Pain is the most outstanding feature of the disease.

"The disease is not fatal; the convalescence is usually rapid and uncomplicated. It may terminate with a single paroxysm of pain, which is described as the 'devil's grip,' because of the resistance to expansion of the chest during seizure."

RITES FOR PRINCESS' MARRIAGE

Plans Made with Vatican for Wedding of Mafalda and Philip.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, July 20.—The Tribuna says that special ecclesiastical arrangements for the religious marriage of Princess Mafalda, second daughter of the King and Queen, to Prince Philip of Hesse have been completed by Monsignor Beccari, Major-Chaplain of the Italian court chapel. The arrangements were made at a series of recent conferences with Cardinal Merry Del Val, secretary of the supreme congregation of the Holy Office.

The ceremony will be accompanied by all Catholic religious rites, with the exception of a special mass, for which no special dispensation can be made, according to canonical laws. Prince Philip, the newspaper asserts, has consented to permit Princess Mafalda religious liberty to remain a Catholic and also has agreed to have the children brought up in the Catholic faith.

JUDGE CITES DARROW FOR CONTEMPT; HE APOLOGIZES

MUST ANSWER THE CITATION TOMORROW

BY PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 20.—The outstanding developments in the trial of the Scopes case on its resumption this morning, were:

1. The citing of Clarence Darrow, famous criminal lawyer and chief of defense counsel, for contempt of court, under $5000 bond, as a result of remarks made by Darrow to Judge John T. Raulston in court Friday. At the afternoon session, however, Darrow apologized and an exchange of handclasps between him and the Judge closed the incident.

2. The reading into the record of statements by eminent theologians that it is impossible to interpret all of the Bible literally and that numberous Bible scholars are able to reconcile evolution with the Bible, as they would have testified had they been permitted.

3. The reading into the record of statements by a number of noted scientists summarizing what they would have testified concerning the nature and proofs of evolution had their testimony been admitted.

Quotes Wilson Letter.

One of the latter, the statement of Prof. Winterton C. Curtis, professor of Zoology at Missouri University, contained a letter written to him in 1922 by Woodrow Wilson in which the former Democratic President said that "of course" he believed in organic evolution, and expressed amazement that "such questions should be raised at this late date."

W. J. Bryan, Secretary of State in President Wilson's first Cabinet, sat only a few feet away as the letter was read, and as Arthur G. Hays of the defense counsel, who was doing the reading, emphasized the sharp, crisp sentences. The letter seemed to make a vastly deeper impression upon the fundamentalist audience than all of the laborious and overwhelming proofs cited by the scientists.

Objection By Bryan.

Objecting to "turning the court into a chautauqua or summer school," the prosecution had strenuously opposed the reading of the statements in open court. Bryan, in particular, objected to the reading, apparently under the impression that unless they were read they would not become public. He appeared determined, if possible, to keep the text of the statements from going to the country. Once he raised the point that the facts contained in the statements were not complete.

"Certainly not," Hays said. "They are mere summaries. If you had not been afraid of the facts, we would have put them in complete, in the presence of the jury, by the testimony of the men who made them."

One of the geologists declared that the rocks surrounding Dayton contained some of the best evidences of the age of the earth and of the successive development of life through the geologic ages. Throughout most of the reading the audience sat in what appeared to approach a stupor, listening dully but intently.

The Judge's action resulted from a colloquy between himself and Darrow in court last Friday morning. The Court had just ruled that the defense could not introduce the testimony of scientists and theologians. Darrow asked for the remainder of the day in which to prepare affidavits showing what the experts would have testified. Judge Raulston replied that he didn't know about that.

Darrow's Remarks.

Darrow, icy with rage, inquired if there was anything which the defense could be permitted to do. Every objection and every request of the State had been granted, resulting in interminable delay, he said, but the defense could not obtain a few hours in which to prepare statements of the nature of testimony which would have required several days to present.

"I hope, Colonel, that you are not reflecting on the Court," said Judge Raulston feebly.

"Your Honor has a perfect right

PROOFS OF MAN'S KINSHIP WITH THE ANIMAL WORLD DISCUSSED BY EDUCATORS

By PAUL ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 20.—Science, deprived by a court ruling of an opportunity to present its case for evolution in the presence of a jury, nevertheless summarized the evidence in the form of sworn statements which defense counsel in the Scopes case today made a part of the record which will go up to the higher courts when the case is appealed. That it will be appealed is based on the assumption that the jury will return a verdict of guilty, an event which is regarded as practically certain.

In addition to science, theology, as represented by eminent divines, also took advantage of the occasion to put into the record its opinion that evolution and the Bible can be reconciled, provided that a literal interpretation of the Bible is not insisted upon, and it is not insisted upon, they declare, by many high religious authorities.

Several Branches of Science.

It will be observed that several branches of science are represented by the scholars who prepared the statements which Clarence Darrow filed today, and that each, with one exception, approaches the subject from the viewpoint of his own science, but that all arrive at the same conclusion, to wit, that the truth of evolution is established, although there are many theories of how it occurred and why it occurred as it did.

Dr. Maynard M. Metcalf, research professor of zoology at Johns Hopkins University, and famous also for his work in biology, includes in his statement the startling fact that he has recently produced in his laboratory 150 new species of protozoa, a low form of sea animal. This is a flat, swift and graphic contradiction of W. J. Bryan's statement in court Thursday that no new species has ever been produced. Dr. Metcalf's statement, in part, follows:

"Intelligent teaching of biology or intelligent approach to any biological science is impossible if the established fact of evolution is omitted. Discussion of the methods by which evolution has been brought about is less essential, but the fact of evolution must be appreciated, for any understanding of the growth of the universe, of the earth, of plants or animals; for any proper grasp of the facts of structure or function of living bodies as involved in medicine and in animal and plant husbandry.

Importance of Evolution.

"Psychology, whether of normal or diseased minds, must constantly remember the processes of evolution; human societies, with their diverse customs, are unintelligible without the facts of their organs and changes, their evolution.

"Teaching in any field that deals with living things is disgracefully, yes, criminally, inadequate if it omits emphasis upon evolution. An intelligent teacher could omit such emphasis only at the expense of his self-respect and of his moral integrity. Such teaching would be criminal malpractice, just as truly as would be a physician's failure to follow established sound methods of treatment because of fear of persecution by ignorant neighbors.

"The fact of evolution—of man, of all living things, of the earth, of the sun, of the stars—is as fully established as the fact that the earth revolves around the sun. It can be only the uninformed who fail to accept evolution as a fact established beyond doubt. On the other hand, there is great uncertainty as to the method by which evolution has been brought about. As to the numerous 'causes' of evolution and their relative importance, there are about as many varieties of opinion as there are students of evolution.

"There is no conflict, no least degree of conflict, between the Bible and the fact of evolution, but the literalist interpretation of the words of the Bible is not only puerile, it is insulting, both to God and to human intelligence.

"Evolution Is Occuring Today Even Under Man's Control"

"Not only has evolution occurred, it is occurring today and occurring even under man's control. If one wishes a new vegetable or a new flower it is, within limits, true that he can order it from the plant breeder and in a few years he will produce it. Hundreds of new plants and animals have been and are being produced in this way. This is evolution of just the sort that has always occurred, only it is influenced by man.

"The different kinds of domestic horses, produced by human experiment, differ far more than do the different kinds of horses found in nature.

"Domestic fowl under man's control have evolved into a large number of kinds far more widely divergent than are the wild kinds in the genus Gallus from which all our domestic chickens came. The genus Brassica, plants belonging to the mustard family, include a number of different sorts of plants. One of these, Brassica cleracea, is the ancestor from which man has evolved the cabbage.

"The cauliflower, kale, Brussels sprouts, kohlrabi and the Swedish turnip differ among themselves far more than do the wild members of the genus Brassica.

"The same sort of thing is seen in hundreds of domestic animals and plants, dogs, cattle, sheep, pigeons, cucumbers, radishes, lettuce, dahlias, roses, wheats, corns, strawberries, peaches, apples, pears, etc. This is all true evolution. To describe adequately the tremendous mass of phenomena which establish the fact of past and continuing evolution would require not a book or a series of books, but a library.

"It is interesting to observe that an organ in one kind of animal may have a different use from the similar organ in a related animal. There are very few, if any, structures in man, for example, which do not show clear indications of descent from an organ of different use in some related animal. The lungs of man correspond to the swim bladder of fishes, certain bones connected with the human larynx were derived from the supporting arches in the bars between the gill slits of our aquatic ancestors, our teeth were once scales in the skin. As the use of an organ changes, in evolution, its structure correspondingly changes.

"I have recently made about 150 species of protozoa in my laboratory, but I have never made an animal. The word species is indefinable, and is used by biologists merely as a convenience, and it has wholly different meanings when applied to different groups of animals and plants. There are many genera of animals and plants in which most of all the species completely intergrade so that specific distinctions are artificial. This is true to large degree among the protozoan forms I have been studying recently."

Dr. Horatio Hackett Newmann is primarily a zoologist, but has attained distinction in biology and other fields, and for seven years was dean of the College of Science of Chicago University. He is the author of many books and monographs, and is recognized as one of the leading scientists of the world.

His review of the evidences or evolution, from the viewpoint of several sciences, comprised a tremendously powerful argument for the proposition that all members of the animal family are related, in varying degrees of closeness, man's nearest relatives being the great anthropoid apes. He divided the evidences into several general classes, as follows:

1. Resemblance in structure with wide divergencies comparable to the variations upon a main theme in music.

2. Vestigial structures, or organs which have become useless, such, for example, as man's vermiform appendix, muscles to move his ears, his rudibentary tail and his prenatal gill slits.

3. Connecting links between species, as, for instance, the fossil remains which link existing modern man with a lower form of men.

4. Blood tests, which show the varying degrees of relationships between animals and men.

5. Embryology, in which the development preceding birth almost exactly retraces the individual's evolutionary history as it is indicated by outside evidence.

6. Paleontology, or the science of fossil remains, which shows the gradual evolution of life, beginning in the older strata and progressing gradually and unbrokenly upward to the present and existing forms.

7. Geographic distribution of animals, showing that certain forms began in a particular spot, and gradually spread out in a widening circle, changing to meet the climatic conditions which they encountered.

8. Genetics, or the science by which men actually make evolution take place under their eyes.

Man and the Apes.

A striking assertion by Dr. Newman was that between man and the anthropoid apes, the differences in blood and structure are decidedly less marked than those between the apes and small monkeys. Another was that there is more evidence in favor of evolution than there is for the theory that the earth is round and that it revolves around the sun.

"There are two distinct types of evidences of evolution," he stated, "one of which has to do with changes that have occurred during past ages, the other with changes that are going on at the present time. The evidences of changes that have taken place in the remote past must in their very nature be indirect and to some extent circumstantial.

"Evidences that species are changing today are quite direct in character, for more or less radical hereditary changes have been seen in the act of taking place.

"The principle of evolution stands in the first rank among natural laws. It is the one great law of life. It depends for its validity not upon conjecture or philosophy, but upon exactly the same sorts of evidence as do other laws of nature.

"Evolution has been tried and tested in every conceivable way for considerably over half a century. Vast numbers of biological facts have been examined in the light of this principle, and without a single exception they have been entirely compatible with it. It would create a sensation in the scientific world if someone were to discover a single fact that could not be reconciled with the principle of evolution.

Basic Assumption.

"A careful study of the situation reveals that the entire fabric of evolutionary evidences is woven about a single broad assumption—that fundamental structural resemblance signifies blood relationship; that, generally speaking, the closeness of structural resemblance runs parallel with closeness of kinship. This is now so amply supported by facts that it has become axiomatic.

"Employing the principle of heredity in a way that is hardly likely to be questioned, we account for the common possession of certain structural peculiarities by all members of a given kind or species of animal by saying that characters have been derived from a common ancestor.

"Once having taken this step we are on the road that lead inevitably to an evolutionary interpretation of natural groups. If the principle of heredity holds for fraternities, for species, where are we to draw the line?

"Any one who has at all seriously studied comparative anatomy must have been impressed with the fact that the animal kingdom exhibits several distinct main types and architecture, each of which characterizes one of the grand divisions of the kingdom. Within each of these great assemblages of animals characterized by a common plan of organization, there are almost innumerable structural diversities within the scope of the fundamental plan. These major or minor departures remind one of variations upon a theme in music, no matter how elaborate the variation may be, the skilled musician recognizes the common theme running through it all."

Gives Illustration.

To illustrate, Dr. Newman said, take the forelimbs of several animals—the foreleg of a horse, the arm of a man, the wing of a bird and the flipper of a whale. Not only do they appear vastly different, but they are put to widely different uses. Yet a study of their anatomy shows a very close relationship, particularly in the bone structure. The scientific conclusion is that they had a common ancestor, and each became modified to meet profoundly different conditions of life which it encountered. Incidentally, he remarked that a man's arm is the ideal limb of the animal kingdom, because it can be used for so many purposes, and thus becomes an ideal tool of the brain. The human foot is far less versatile.

Vestigial structures, or vestiges of organs, are organs that have degenerated because of disuse. Examples are the tiny and totally useless hind legs of a python, the hind limbs of a whale, which are completely buried under blubber, and whose muscles are atrophied; the splint bones in a horse's leg, which once were toes; and the thumb on the wing of a bird. Man has no less than 180 of these vestigial structures, making him, as Dr. Newman observed, "a walking museum of antiquities." He continued:

"Among these are the vermiform appendix, the abbreviated tail with its set of caudal muscles, a complicated set of muscles for moving the ears, but practically functionless in all but a very few men; a complete equipment of scalp muscles used by other animals for erecting the hair; gill slits in the embryo, such as sea animals use in breathing; miniature third eyelids, functional in all reptiles and birds, but greatly reduced in all mammals; a complete coating of embryonic hair, which disappears long before birth and can hardly serve any useful function while it lasts. These and numerous other structures of the same sort can be reasonably interpreted as evidence that man has descended from ancestors in which these organs were used. Man has never completely lost these characters. He continues to inherit them though he no longer has any use for them. Heredity is stubborn and tenacious.

Intermediate Forms.

"If one group of animals has been derived by descent from another there should be some forms more or less intermediate between the the two and with some characteristics of both groups. Many such connecting links actually exist at the present time.

"Among the vertebrates we have the familiar example of the lung fishes with both the gills of fishes and lungs like with those of land vertebrates.

"Without evolution as a guiding principle, compartive anatomy would be a hopeless mass of meaningless and disconnected facts."

Explaining that the purpose of classification of animals and plants was to arrange the species in groups which expressed their relationship, Dr. Norman pointed out that dogs, which are considered as domesticated and modified wolves, are placed in the same group as wolves, jackals and foxes.

"There is no more difficulty in finding the correct classification for man than for any other species," he continued. "Indeed, there are hundreds of species which it is more difficult to classify properly.

"Anatomically, the genus homo man bears a striking resemblance to the anthropoid apes. Bone for bone, muscle for muscle, nerve for nerve, and in many special details, men and the anthropoid apes are extremely similar. Likenesses are so obvious that even the novice in comparative anatomy notes them at a glance. Man is many degrees closer anatomically to the great apes than the latter are to the true monkeys, yet the special creationist insists upon placing man in biological isolation, as a creature without affinities to the animal world.

Man As a Vertebrate.

"If a man is a creature apart from all animals, it is extremely difficult to understand the significance of the fact that he is constructed along lines so closely similar to those of certain animals. That his processes of reproduction are exactly those of other animals, that in his development he shows the closest parallelism step for step to the apes, that his modes of nutrition, respiration and excretion involve the same chemical processes, and that even his fundamental mental processes are of the same kind, though differing in degree of specialization, as are those of lower animals.

"Comparative anatomists recognize man as a vertebrate, for he has all of the characteristic features of that group. He is obviously a mammal, for he complies with qualifications of that class in having hair, in suckling the young by means of mammary glands, in having two sets of teeth one succeeding the other, in having the teeth differentiated into incisors, canines, and molars, and in many other particulars of skeleton, muscular system, circulatory system, alimentary system, brain and other parts of the central nervous system.

"Among mammals, man belongs to the well defined order of primates, an order anatomically about half-way between the most generalized and the most specialized of the mammalian orders. Apart from his extraordinary nervous specialization, man is a relatively generalized mammal.

Order of Primates.

"The order of primates consists of two suborders, lemuroidea and anthropoidea. The lemurs or half apes are small arborial animals with somewhat squirrel-like habits but with flat nails and certain other primate characters.

"The anthropoid or man-like primates are divided into four distinct families—marmesets, new world monkeys, anthropoid apes and men. The latter include four genera of men, namely: pithocanthropus, paleanthropus and eoanthropus, all of which are extinct, and the genus homo, which includes man and some older types which are extinct. The scientific classification of modern man is homo sapiens, and the earliest known specimens are the fossil remains known as the "Cro-Magnon Men" consisting of a dozen skeletons of magnificent size and proportions, whose age is estimated at approximately 25,000 years.

The oldest genus, pithecanthropus erectus, is represented by the famous fossil remains known as pithecanthropus erectus, excavated 30 years ago in Java from the rock bed of river. The age of the rock strata in which the remains were found is estimated at 500,000 years. The skull cap is slightly larger than that of an ape, the thigh bone is almost that of a modern man and the molars are subhuman. For many years scientists were divided on whether to class the remains as those of ape or man, being almost precisely midway, but they are now classified as those of the lowest known order of man.

"Heidelberg Man" Found in Strata Approximately 400,000 Years Old

The genus paleanthropus is represented by the fossil remains known as the "Heidelberg man," found in a rock strata formed approximately 400,000 years ago. The jaw is massive and, like a gorilla, has no chin, the teeth are strictly human although much larger and heavier than those of modern men.

The genus coanthropus is represented by the fossil remains known as the "piltdown man," with jaw and teeth even more simian than those of the "Heidelberg man," but skull decidedly human. The age is placed at 200,000 to 300,000 years.

In the genus homo, besides modern man, are placed the Neoanderthal men of which numerous fossil specimens have been found. They were about 5 feet 3 inches in height, of stooping posture, long flathead ape-like brow ridges and scarcely any forehead, and an immensely thick and muscular neck. The jaw was heavy and without a chin. The teeth were adapted to a coarse vegetable diet. The brain was quite large, but markedly deficient in the parts which are the seat of the higher mental functions.

The fossil of the "Rhodesian man," found only a few years ago, and described in great detail in the Post-Dispatch at that time, is as primitive in some respects as the "Neanderthal man," but in some others shows much greater advancement. Science has not yet decided upon its exact status.

The "Cro-Magnons," so called because the first skeletons were found near that village in France, and who are the earliest known examples of our own species were described by Dr. Newman "as the most perfect race, physically, of which we have any knowledge." All the male skeletons were well over 6 feet in height, and so was one of the women.

"The species homo sapiens consists of at least four sub-species or major varieties, each consisting of numerous minor race and admixture of these," Dr. Newman continued.

"This high degree of diversity within the species is evidence of rapid evolution. If 6000 years ago, as the special creationists claim, one man was created, and has become the ancestor of all men living today, evolution must have gone on at an extremely rapid rate since in order to have produced so many widely different races, for there could scarcely have been more than 120 generations in that time."

Reaction to Blood Tests.

But structural resemblances as a basis of classification are but crude when compared with the accuracy afforded by the blood test, he added. These have afforded a highly specific index to the degree of blood relationships, because the chemical ingredients of the blood can be exactly determined. If small doses of human blood ingredients are injected into a rabbit at two-day intervals, it becomes very sick and continues so until its own blood sets up an anti-toxin. This anti-toxin, or anti-human serum, can itself be extracted and analyzed and it forms a delicate indicator of the rabbit's degree of relationship with man.

In other animals, still further removed from man, the reaction is still greater. When, however, the ingredients of human blood are thus injected into old world monkeys, the reaction is less than in rabbits, in new world monkeys it it still less, and when lemurs and apes are reached, there is no reaction at all.

The discovery of the blood test resulted in a conciderable rearrangement of classification previously based on structural likenesses, Dr. Newman said. For example, it showed the whale to be more closely related to the hog than to any other mammal, and thus confirmed a diagnosis which a few anatomists had made on what their colleagues regarded as very slender grounds. The technique of blood testing is new and difficult, and its resources have not yet been fully employed.

"Of all the systems of the animal body," Dr. Newman said, "blood appears to have retained most fully its ancestral characteristics." In other words, it has changed less than any other bodily system.

"The various stages in the development of the individual prior to its birth, are like the various ancestral forms from which the species is descended, the earliest embryonic stages being like the most remote ancestors, and the latter stages like the more recent ancestors. In other words, the developmental history of the individual may be regarded as an abbreviated resume of its ancestral history.

"The human heart, for example, has at first the form of two nearly straight tubes, which soon fuse for part of their length to form a single tube divided at the two ends into two tubes. Later the single tube differentiates lengthwise into two cavities, the auricle and the ventricle, and is now in the stage equivalent to that of an adult fish. The auricle next divides into two chambers, thus resembling that of an amphibian. Finally the ventricle subdivides also, giving rise to the four-chambered heart characteristic of mammals.

"The human embryo and that of the anthropoid apes show the closest of resemblances at every stage, and diverge sharply only in the late stages of prenatal life. So close a resemblance in development histories is found only in species that are members of the same ancestral stock.

"According to the most recent computations based on the rate of radium emanation, 1,000,000,000 years have elapsed since the earth attained its present diameter. Various estimates as to the time since the first life appeared upon the surface of the globe range from 50,000,000 to 500,000,000 years. Even the lowest figure gives ample time for any sort of evolutionary change, no matter how slow.

"The crust of the earth is arranged in a series of horizontal strata of varying thickness. The lowest layers are obviously the oldest. It is an easy task for the geologist to determine the original order of the strata.

"There is a gradual progression toward more highly specialized forms, as one proceeds from lower to higher strata.

Many Groups Now Extinct.

"Many groups of animals reached their climax long ages ago and have become extinct.

"It is common to find a new group arising near the close of some geologic period when vast climatic changes were taking place. Such an incipient group almost regularly becomes the dominant group of the next period.

"Many practically complete fossil pedigrees have been worked out connecting modern specialized types with simpler ancestors. Such pedigrees have been worked out for the horse, the elephant, the camel, the rhinoceros and other equally specialized modern types.

Dr. Newman then described the complete pedigree of the horse, beginning with the eohippus, an animal about 11 inches high, with a short neck and four toes. Then came the orchippus, slightly larger, and with all but the second toe receding; the mesochippus, the plichippus, and finally the equis and modern horse, in which the animal has reached its present height, all its toes have become vestigial except one, its neck elongated to enable it to graze without bending its knees, and a perfect grazing mechanism of lips and teeth have developed. There is nowhere a more complete history of the evolution of a species, Dr. Newman stated.

Explanation of Genetics.

"Genetics may be defined as the experimental and analytical study of variation and heredity, the two primary causal factors of organic evolution. As such, genetics aim not so much at furnishing evidence of the fact of evolution as at discovering its causes. Incidentally, however, when man takes a hand in controlling evolutionary processes and actually observes new hereditary types taking origin from old, he is observing at first hand the actual processes of evolution. Suffice it to say that the geneticist is an eyewitness of present-day evolution, and is able to offer the most direct evidence that evolution is a fact." He concludes:

"All of the lines of evidence presented point strongly to organic evolution, and none are contrary to this principle. Most of the facts, moreover, are utterly incompatible with the only rival explanation, special creation. Not only do these evidences tell a straightforward story of evolution, but each one is entirely consistent with all of the others. Any conception that is so far-reaching, so consistent, and that has led to so much advance in the understanding of nature, is at least an extremely valuable idea and one not lightly to be cast aside in case it fails to agree with one's prejudices."

Additional statements were by Dr. Jacob G. Lipman, dean of the College of Agriculture of New Jersey University who traced the bearing of evolution on soils and plant life; by Dr. Winerton C. Curtis of the University of Missouri who discussed the evidences of man's origin, and by Kertley F. Mather, chairman of the Department of Geology at Harvard University, who told of the geologic periods and the evidences they furnished of evolution, by Dr. Fay-Cooper Cole, University of Chicago, who testified that anthropologists accepted evolution; by Dr. Wilbur A. Nelson, State geologist of Tennessee, who said it would be impossible to teach geology without using the theory of evolution, and by Dr. Charles Hubbard Judd, director of the School of Education, University of Chicago, who stated the doctrine of evolution was the basis for the understanding of all human institutions.

WOODROW WILSON WROTE IN 1922 'I DO BELIEVE IN ORGANIC EVOLUTION'

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 20.

THE voice of Woodrow Wilson was lifted here today to indorse evolution in its battle with fundamentalists of William Jennings Bryan, once his Secretary of State. This belief of the late former president in the theory of evolution was read into the record of the Scopes trial by Dr. Winterton C. Curtis of Missouri University in a prepared affidavit.

It was contained in a letter to Curtis, written by Wilson on Aug. 29, 1922, from his S. street home in Washington. Wilson said:

"May it not suffice for me to say in reply to your letter of Aug. 25, that of course like every other man of intelligence and education, I do believe in organic evolution. It surprised me that at this late date such questions should be asked."

'BIBLE SHOULD NOT BE USED AS TEXTBOOK ON SCIENCE'

Ancient Writers Used Science for Their Day Only to Illustrate Religion, Says Pastor.

The Bible should not be used as a textbook on science, the Rev. J. D. Tussey declared in his sermon yesterday at St. John's Methodist Church, South. He is assistant pastor. Referring to the Tennessee evolution case, he said:

"A better knowledge of the greatest of all books, the Bible, would save many of its friends from gravely misusing it and suffering for it claims which it does not from making for itself. A better knowledge of it would also save certain men who so vehemently oppose it, to see its rare and priceless greatness, and its untold value to mankind. Each needs to know that this venerable library of sacred books has grown up out of humanity's struggle forward. They are not the producers, but the products of man's religion.

"They woefully misuse the book who attempt to make it a textbook on science; and it is just here where most of the confusion arises on the part of both scientists and religionists. The ancient writers used the accepted science of their day. If science it may be called, only as illustrative of religious truths they sought to teach, for their one purpose was religious, not scientific.

"To a careful reader of the much controverted first chapter of Genesis, it becomes quite obvious that the writer's main purpose was not the giving of a system of cosmogony, but the story of the origin and sanctity of the Sabbath as the people had come to hold it. He quite honestly employed the theories current in his day and closes his chapter with a pointed application on Sabbath observance.

"Most men are today agreed that the earth is round and that the sun does not move around it. In like manner many devout men have long felt convinced of the fact of organic evolution, and have finally seen in it God's own stupendous program in building this universe, and to them the glory of the Lord has but increased as they have come to view the marvelous drama that has taken place through countless millions of years. We have long since admitted that men may be religious and hold that the earth is round. We shall one day come to see that men may be truly religious, whatever their beliefs as to cosmogonies, nor, if they be discerning, abate one whit of their zeal for religion nor their love for the grand old book of a thousand storms."

FIRE DEPARTMENT AIDS POLICE DISPOSE OF WHISKY MASH

15,000 Gallons Found in Raid of House — Pumped Into Sewer.

Police today called upon the Fire Department to help dispose of whisky mash, estimated at 15,000 gallons, found in a raid at noon on a house at 5131 Dagmar avenue. A still also was discovered.

The mash was in a vat below the basement floor level, and could not be destroyed by battering. The idea of sprinkling coal oil into the mash to spoil it was abandoned, as local distillers have been known to redistill such mash and sell it, so it was decided to ask the Fire Department to pump the mash into the nearest sewer.

Two men on the premises were arrested.

MOSES SHOENBERG DIES SUDDENLY OF APOPLEXY AT 72

FUNERAL WEDNESDAY AT TEMPLE ISRAEL

Big Corporation Owns Famous-Barr Store Here and Similar Establishments in 4 Other Cities.

The funeral of Moses Shoenberg, vice president of the May Department Stores Co., will be held Wednesday at 10 a. m., at Temple Israel, Kingshighway and Washington avenue. Mr. Shoenberg died yesterday morning in his suite at Hotel Chase from the second recurrence of an apoplectic stroke which he suffered in November, 1921, and which had kept him from active participation in business since then. He was 72 years old.

With his brother-in-law, David May, Mr. Shoenberg founded the May Department Stores Co., which owns the Famous-Barr store, the nationally large May Co. store in Cleveland and departments stores in Denver, Los Angeles and Akron.

The May Co. is capitalized at $70,000,000. The extent of Mr. Shoenberg's holdings could not be learned today, but his interest is known to be a very large one.

Leading men in business and professional life will serve as honorary pallbearers at the funeral. The list announced is headed by Dr. Hermon Chancellor Herbert S. Hadley, who as Governor of Missouri, appointed Mr. Shoenberg a colonel on his staff, in recognition of his high standing as a citizen and a business man. The funeral will be conducted by Rabbi Julian Miller, officiating as summer supply for the St. Louis Reformed congregation.

Career of Shoenberg.

Mr. Shoenberg was born in Dayton, O., and attended school there up to his fifteenth year. He then desired to try his hand in business. And his parents outfitted him in a small store in a town near Dayton. This venture was not a success, and the family tradition is that young Shoenberg became homesick and traded his store to a farmer for a team and wagon, with which he drove back to Dayton. But he still believed he could make success in business, and proved it the second time in a men's furnishing shop in a fairly desirable location in Dayton. He was soon able to repay the loans with interest.

In 1878 he removed to the booming mining town of Leadville, Colo., and with his brother-in-law established the retail business of May & Shoenberg. In 1885 he removed to Kansas City, and for seven years was a member of the firm of G. Bernheimer Bros. & Co.

In 1892 he came to St. Louis with his brother-in-law and founded the famous store. The first location was on Franklin avenue, but after three years Famous bought out D. Crawford & Co. and removed to the northeast corner of Sixth street and Washington avenue.

The May Department Stores Co. was incorporated in 1910, to take over the Famous, and the May stores in Cleveland and Denver. In the following year the company acquired the William Barr Dry Goods Co., which occupied the four-story Julia Building. The enhancing of the Railway Exchange Building followed, and the Barr block was removed to the Washington avenue location while the Julia Building was wrecked and the 21-story edifice was constructed on its site, the lower one-third for the occupancy of Famous-Barr, the stores in Los Angeles and Boston were acquired subsequently.

Mr. Shoenberg, up to the time when he was obliged to retire from business, was very active in the affairs of the Famous-Barr store. His personnel and advertising were his special concern—advertising as the means of attracting the public, and a well informed and courteous personnel as the means of making sales and holding customers.

Selected Many Employes.

More than 50 persons now in responsible positions with the Famous-Barr store, it was said at the store today, were personally selected by Mr. Shoenberg from minor positions for promotion. One man, now holding an important place in the credit department, was taken by Mr. Shoenberg from the position of elevator operator.

He was a director, until recently, of the First National Bank, and was attending a meeting of the bank's board at the time when he suffered his first stroke. He was chairman of the board of the Commercial Investment Trust Co. of New York, a $15,000,000 concern. He was a director of the brokerage firm of Sidney M. Shoenberg & Co., headed by his son, also of the Public Discount Stamp Co. and of other business concerns here and elsewhere.

'BIBLE SHOULD NOT BE USED AS TEXTBOOK ON SCIENCE'

Ancient Writers Used Sciences of Their Day Only to Illustrate Religion, Says Pastor.

The Bible should not be treated as a textbook on science, the Rev. J. D. Tussey declared in his sermon yesterday at St. John's Methodist Church, South. He is assistant pastor. Referring to the Tennessee evolution case, he said:

"A better knowledge of that greatest of all books, the Bible, would save many of its friends from gravely misusing it and making for it claims which it is far from making for itself. A better knowledge of it would also help certain men who so vehemently oppose it, to see its rare and friendly greatness, and its untold value to mankind. In like manner many devout men have long felt convinced of the fact of organic evolution, and have frankly seen in it God's own stupendous program in building this universe; and to them the glory of the Lord has but increased as they have tried to view the marvelous drama that has taken place through countless millions of years. We have long since admitted that men may be religious and hold that the earth is round. We shall one day come to see that men may be truly religious, whatever their beliefs as to cosmogonies, nor, if they be discerning, abate one whit of their zeal for religion nor their love for the grand old book of a thousand storms."

FIRE DEPARTMENT AIDS POLICE DISPOSE OF WHISKY MASH

15,000 Gallons Found in Raid on House — Pumped Into Sewer.

Police today called upon the Fire Department to help dispose of whisky mash, estimated at 15,000 gallons, found in a raid at noon on a house at 5131 Daggett avenue. A still also was uncovered.

The mash was in a vat below the basement floor level, and could not be destroyed by battering. The idea of sprinkling coal oil into the mash to spoil it was abandoned, as local distillers have been known to redistill such mash and sell it. So it was decided to ask the Fire Department to pump the mash into the nearest sewer.

Two men on the premises were arrested.

Negro Dies in Courtroom.

While listening to testimony in a case in Police Judge Beck's court at noon today, Iona Brackston, 28, a negress, residing in the neighborhood of Eighth and Carr streets, collapsed and died, presumably from heart disease.

MOSES SHOENBERG DIES SUDDENLY OF APOPLEXY AT 72

FUNERAL WEDNESDAY AT TEMPLE ISRAEL

His Corporation Owns Famous-Barr Store Here and Similar Establishments in 4 Other Cities.

The funeral of Moses Shoenberg, vice president of the May Department Stores Co., will be held Wednesday at 10 a. m., at Temple Israel, Kingshighway and Washington avenue. He died yesterday morning in his suite at Hotel Chase from the second recurrence of an apoplectic stroke which he suffered in November, 1921, and which had kept him from active participation in business since then. He was 72 years old.

With his brother-in-law, David May, Mr. Shoenberg founded the May Department Stores Co., which owns the Famous-Barr store, the locally large May Co. store in Cleveland and departments stores in Denver, Los Angeles and Akron.

The May Co. is capitalized at $60,000,000. The extent of Mr. Shoenberg's holdings could not be learned today, but his interest is known to be a very large one.

Leading men in business and professional life will serve as honorary pallbearers at the funeral. The list announced is headed by the name of Chancellor Herbert S. Hadley, who as Governor of Missouri, appointed Mr. Shoenberg a colonel on his staff, in recognition of his high standing as a citizen and a business man. The funeral will be conducted by Rabbi Julian Feiler, officiating as summer supply for the St. Louis Reformed congregation.

Career of Shoenberg.

Mr. Shoenberg was born in Dayton, O., and attended school there up to his fifteenth year. He then desired to try his hand in business. So his parents outfitted him in a small store in a town near Dayton. This venture was not a success, and the family tradition is that young Shoenberg became bankrupt and traded his store to a farmer for a team and wagon, with which he drove back to Dayton. But he still believed he could make success in business, and proved it after the family had staked him a second time in a men's furnishing shop in a fairly desirable location in Dayton. He was soon able to repay the loans with interest.

In 1878 he removed to the booming mining town of Leadville, Colo., and with his brother-in-law established the retail business of May & Shoenberg. In 1885 he removed to Kansas City, and for seven years was a member of the firm of G. Arnheimer Bros. & Co.

In 1892 he came to St. Louis with his brother-in-law and founded the famous store. The first location was on Franklin avenue, but after some years Famous bought out D. Crawford & Co. and removed to the northeast corner of Sixth street and Washington avenue.

The May Department Stores Co. was incorporated in 1910, to take over the Famous, and the May stores in Cleveland and Denver. In the following year the company acquired the William Barr Dry Goods Co., which occupied the eight-story Julia Building. The financing of the Railway Exchange Building followed, and the Barr building was removed to the Washington avenue location while the Julia Building was wrecked and the 21-story edifice was constructed on its site, the lower one-third for the occupancy of Famous-Barr, the stores in Los Angeles and Akron were acquired subsequently.

Mr. Shoenberg, up to the time when he was obliged to retire from business, was very active in the affairs of the Famous-Barr store. Personnel and advertising were his special concern—advertising as the means of attracting the public and a well informed and courteous personnel as the means of making sales and holding customers.

Selected Many Employes.

More than 50 persons now in responsible positions with the Famous-Barr store, it was said at the store today, were personally selected by Mr. Shoenberg from minor positions for promotion. One man, now holding an important place in the credit department, was taken by Mr. Shoenberg from the position of elevator operator.

He was a director, until recently, of the First National Bank, and was attending a meeting of the bank's board at the time when he suffered his first stroke. He was chairman of the board of the Commercial Investment Trust Co. of New York, a $15,000,000 concern. He was a director of the brokerage firm of Sidney M. Shoenberg & Co., headed by his son, also of the Eagle Discount Stamp Co. and of other business concerns here and elsewhere.

Mr. Shoenberg was very active in philanthropic and civic work, and in recent years had been a leading supporter of the Jewish Chronic Invalids' Home, on Fee Fee road, for the care of tubercular and other chronic cases. He was interested in a similar institution in Denver, and was a former head of the Federation of Jewish Charities here, and a director of the Jewish Hospital. He was active in war drives and rehabilitation movements. He was a former president of Temple Israel congregation.

His interest in music was almost a passion. He was proficient in instrumental music, had a good voice, and was a regular attendant at the Symphony concerts.

His death was unexpected at this time. He was in California the first three months of this year, and there suffered his second stroke. After recovering partially from this attack, he returned here in April. He and Mrs. Shoenberg were planning to go to Charlevoix, Mich., soon.

Leaves Wife and Son.

Mrs. Shoenberg formerly was Miss Dollie Bernheimer of Quincy, Ill. Sydney M. Shoenberg was their only child. A brother who lives in Paris is Louis D. Beaumont, that name being the French equivalent of the name Shoenberg. He is a member of the Legion of Honor, has been active in work for the Navy of France, and is largely interested in the May company.

The active pallbearers will be A. F. Alphonse, C. F. Jackson, William B. Long, Louis M. Monheimer, Robert J. Holden, A. H. Hillenkoetter and Claude B. Burton.

"TRIVIAL" INJURY IS FATAL

Switchman Hurt May 30, Developed Headache July 1.

A head injury at first considered trivial caused the death last night at the Missouri Pacific Hospital of Clarence C. Brasher, 56, a Jefferson City switchman, who was struck by a box car May 30.

Hospital physicians said Brasher did not apply for treatment until July 1, when he complained of a headache. He left the hospital, but returned July 9 in a serious condition, growing steadily worse.

Reservist Makes Parachute Leap.

Burt P. Steele of 1613 North Union boulevard, a member of the St. Louis Naval Reserve Air Unit, made a successful parachute jump from an airplane at Lambert-St. Louis Field yesterday morning. He was the first member of the unit to make the leap. The plane, piloted by Frank T. Dunn, was about 2000 feet in the air when the jump was made.

$40-A-WEEK MAN, WITH 7 IN FAMILY, EMBEZZLES $6000

William W. Nunn, 44, Shoe Machinery Firm Cashier, Admits to Police He Stole to Live.

PLANNED TO MAKE SHORTAGE GOOD

"I Have No Vices; Everything Went for Rent and Food," He Asserts — Named in Indictment.

Supporting himself and six other persons, in three establishments, was too much of a task for William W. Nunn on his salary of $40 a week as cashier and head bookkeeper of the Champion Shoe Machinery Co., he pleaded today at Police Headquarters, as a reason for embezzlement of about $6000 during the last three and one-half years.

Nunn, who is 44 years old, admitted the embezzlement to reporters and detectives. He has been unable to furnish bond since his arrest at Union, Mo., Saturday night. He had been staying on a small farm at Krakow, near Union, with his wife and her mother, since quitting his position in May, when an audit of his books was begun.

He was married four years ago, for the second time, thinking that would reduce his expenses, he said, because his four children by his first wife, who died when the last was born, had been staying with their maternal grandmother, but they preferred remaining with the grandmother and his expenses were increased. In addition, Nunn says, he has had to support his invalid father at Cape Girardeau, Mo.

"Couldn't Keep Up."

Starting to work for the shoe machinery company, which is at 3718-41 Forest Park boulevard, 14 years ago, when it was small, Nunn said, he worked hard as the company grew and obtained some pay increase, but none for the last five years.

"I just couldn't keep up," Nunn said. "I meant to put the money back, hoping I'd get a raise some day, but I couldn't catch up. I'm sorry for my family, but I'm ready to take my medicine.

Has No Vices.

"I was the whole office force at first, but I helped build up the concern and finally had three bookkeepers under me. I had to fight for every little raise I got. I had a daily contingent fund of $300 to $400 in my control, and sometimes very large sums. Every Saturday I went to the bank by myself and got the $8000 to $10,000 payroll. I could have taken that and gone to China or Halifax.

"It took every nickel I made for food and rent. Clothes and medicine were always a question. Three and a half years ago I began taking money. They say I took $6000. I don't know; maybe it was that much. I haven't any vices; don't gamble, and always stayed at home. In February I rented six rooms on St. Louis avenue for $75 a month, because my two daughters agreed to live with us."

"In May company officials said they were going to have an audit, so I simply mailed in my keys and resigned. Since then I've had interviews with the officials and the surety company that bonded me, and they told me there were large discrepancies. I told them where they could find me and promised to come in, if they notified me, in case they wanted to prosecute me. Instead they told the Sheriff at Union and he arrested me when I went to the store there. I've only got $2."

Nunn was indicted last Thursday after an accountant hired by the machinery company had told about 34 checks drawn on the company, which, he said, apparently had been raised after officials had countersigned them. These were payable to "cash."

MUNICIPAL OPERA ATTENDANCE

Rain Last Week Prevented Record Crowd This Season.

Exact figures will not be made public till later, but Herbert's operetta leads by a slight margin. "Cavalleria" was the organization's first experiment with grand opera.

LIQUOR RAID ON RESIDENCE MADE ON TIP OF GIRL

Acting on information furnished by a 17-year-old girl, police yesterday raided a residence at 2614 North Ninth street. Mrs. Mollie Thies, who lives there, was arrested after the policemen had found 75 bottles containing a beverage which they say is home brew. The informant declared she had seen men drinking on a visit to the place.

The police made 93 arrests yesterday and last night. Ten men were taken in eight saloon raids and three were booked charged with carrying concealed weapons, including a man who was arrested on the Free Bridge when policemen found five pints of whisky and a loaded revolver in a door pocket of his automobile.

Two thousand pints of alleged home brew, 100 gallons of beer mash, 113 cans of malt, 11 gallons of alleged moonshine whisky, 1500 empty bottles and 5000 bottle caps were seized in a raid late Saturday on a room above a saloon at 100 South Ninth street. Joseph Weinhardt, proprietor, was arrested.

A large still and 50 barrels of mash were found in a raid on an unoccupied house at 4032 Cottage avenue.

ALTON JUSTICE OF THE PEACE IS BURIED WITH KLAN RITUAL

500 Members of Robed Order Follow Funeral Procession of H. N. Lessner, 66, to Oakwood Cemetery.

Abou 500 men and women of the Ku Klux Klan yesterday afternoon at Alton marched from the Ku Klux meeting hall to Oakwood Cemetery in the funeral procession of H. H. Lessner, 66 years old, Justice of the Peace, who was a member of the klan and also of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. More than 1000 other persons had assembled at the cemetery to observe the ceremonies at the grave.

Lessner died a week ago yesterday, but as he had expressed a desire for a Sunday funeral under the Ku Klux ritual, the body was held at an undertaker's until yesterday. His brother, Charles E. Lessner, who died last Wednesday, was buried in the same cemetery Saturday.

The body lay in state yesterday morning in the Ku Klux hall, where about 150 robed klansmen sat around the room. The Rev. S. D. McKenny of Cherry Street Baptist Church conducted a brief service in the hall, and members of the two fraternal organizations took over the services at the grave, where Klansmen sang Ku Klux songs and a Ku Klux quartet sang a hymn.

MAN WOUNDED IN STRUGGLE WITH ROBBER IN ROOM

Percy Hundley Shot in Thigh by One of Two Holdup Men Demanding Money From Woman, 82

THREE YOUTHS AND GIRL ARE ARRESTED

One Man Signs Confession Implicating Other Men in Invading Rooming House at 3178A Easton.

Mrs. Caroline Aubuchon, 82 years old, proprietor of a rooming house at 3178A Easton avenue, answered the doorbell at 1 a. m. yesterday and was confronted by two men, one with a revolver.

"You've got plenty of money and we want some of it," the armed man said.

Mrs. Aubuchon obtained eight $1 bills and a $2 bill for them, but they demanded more and marched her into a room which they supposed was hers, but which was occupied by Percy Hundley, 38 years old, and his wife and 12-year-old daughter. Hundley got out of bed and grappled with one of the robbers, and was shot in the left thigh by the other.

The robbers escaped in a taxicab, which was traced to 4230A Easton avenue, where police arrested four persons who described themselves as Roy Renfro, 20 years old, of 4359 Cozens avenue; Hoyt Jordan, 23, of 3548 Lindell boulevard; William Kendall, 25, of 4230A Easton, and Dora Dunning, 17 years old, stepdaughter of Kendall. The police reported that eight $1 bills and a $2 bill and a revolver were found under a pillow.

In a signed confession, Renfro said he and Jordan robbed Mrs. Aubuchon while Kendall acted as a lookout and Miss Dunning stayed in the taxicab, and that he shot Hundley when the latter grappled with Jordan.

Jordan and Kendall corroborated Renfro. Kendall, in addition, confessed to stealing a Ford from the Kroger warehouse, Tiffany and Park avenues, July 2, stealing a Chevrolet at Harrisburg, Ill., and looting a clothing store at Dixon, Mo., July 11.

FINDS FIVE-DAY WEEK IN SUMMER HELPS BUSINESS

Head of Electric Meter Corporation of New York Urges Adoption of Plan.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 20.—Advocates of an all-day Saturday holiday in industry and business in summer gained more ammunition yesterday in a letter from Reginald Pelham Bolton, president of the Electric Meter Corporation, to the Merchants' Association.

Bolton, supporting the movement toward a universal five-day week in summer, declared 35 employes in his company last summer did more work in the short week than when they worked five and a half days.

Recent investigation by the New York World disclosed that an increasing number of business and industrial houses in many large cities, particularly in the East, are closing all day Saturday in summer.

Bolton said the five-day week in his company was begun experimentally last year.

"It was understood," he said, "that the arrangement would continue so long as the work did not fall behind. During the first week thereafter our outside staff, two-thirds of the personnel, turned in within three days an amount of additional work corresponding to the Saturday morning's average performance. I am personally of the belief that if the interest of the workers can be aroused by such methods as we have employed the five-day working week would produce as much if not more in the way of results in industry and business, as the five and a half or six-day week."

Bolton added that wages were not reduced as a result of the reduction in hours.

OVERLAND CITIZENS TO SUE TO HALT SEWER PROJECTS

Injunction suits to restrain the St. Louis County Court from contracting for work or levying taxes for work in Sewer Districts 6 and 7, lying in and around Overland Park, will be filed tomorrow, the County Court was notified today. The court has insisted the taxpayers discharge their obligations on the sewer work, aggregating $300,000, within five years, while the citizens of Overland insist they should have 20 years to pay for the work.

Those who filed the notices and who will be plaintiffs in the injunction suit are: For District 6, Charles H. Allen and wife, and William J. Strackbein and wife; for District 7, Pierre W. Rose and wife and Volney Dunham and wife. The suit will be filed in Circuit Court at Clayton.

CHASED DRIVER DISCARDS JUGS

When detectives stationed on the free bridge attempted to stop a Ford coupe speeding west on the bridge at 11:30 a. m. today the driver increased his speed and ran past them. The officers gave chase in another machine and overtook the car at Seventh and Chouteau.

They reported that the driver, who described himself as Tony Togis, 33 years old, of 215 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, threw two one-gallon jugs containing moonshine whisky from the car during the chase. The detectives failed to save any of the liquor and will send Togis to Police Court on charges of littering the street with glass, in violation of a city ordinance, if efforts to obtain warrants for violation of the State liquor laws fail.

TORNADO RELIEF WORK IN MISSOURI ABOUT COMPLETED

Red Cross Has Spent Approximately $500,000 in Rehabilitation in Five Counties.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FREDERICKTOWN, Mo., July 20.—After four months of work the National Red Cross Disaster Relief Committee has practically completed its work of relief and rehabilitation of the damage wrought by the tornado of March 18 in the five Missouri counties of Iron, Madison, Bollinger, Cape Girardeau and Perry. It is expected by those in charge that all cases of need will have been finally passed upon during the present week.

This tornado started at Annapolis, a mining town in Iron County, demolishing the town and mining plant and then plowing its course eastward through the central part of Madison, the northern ends of Bollinger and Cape Girardeau and the southern part of Perry counties, and then across into Illinois and Indiana.

The Red Cross national organization promptly sent workers into the stricken areas and within a few hours every case of injury had been attended. The territory was formed into two relief areas, one with headquarters at Annapolis and the other at Perryville.

After a survey, 427 cases were registered in the five counties, 207 in the Annapolis area and 170 in the Perryville area. Assistance was given to substantially three-fourths of these cases. In many cases destroyed buildings were rebuilt, in others clothing and household furniture was furnished. In cases where teams or livestock or tools were necessary for the livelihood of the family, they were supplied. No money was given in any case, all purchases being made from local dealers and the bills paid of the Red Cross organization. It has been estimated that the Red Cross has disbursed in the five damaged Missouri counties in the last four months $500,000.

MACABEES OPEN CONVENTION

"Dry" Session Is Promised for Washington by Supreme Commander.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—A fraternal gathering as "arid as the desert of Sahara" was promised for Washington today by A. W. Frye, supreme commander of the Maccabees, in opening the quadrennial convention of the order.

"The Maccabees stand for obedience to the law," he said. "We have brought 2000 automobiles here from every part of the United States and Canada without a serious accident to an officially enrolled car. We shall show the world that a great body of fraternalists like this can go on a holiday and have all the fun in the world without making a joke of the law." Six thousand men and women were called today to be initiated into the order here.

Identified as Purse Snatcher.

A 17-year-old negro, who was arrested by Police Captain Nally last night, was identified by four women as the man who snatched their purses during June and July. The prisoner denies the charge.

Judge Cites Darrow for Contempt

to hope," Darrow replied.

This furnished the basis for the Judge's action today. He stated today that "there were two things which a court should always avoid —allowing his own feelings to prejudice the jury, and allowing them to creep into his rulings."

Expects "Return of Courtesy."

He had waited, he said, for "passions to subside" before taking action. He had always endeavored to be courteous to visiting lawyers, but expected them to return the courtesy. In this case he declared "further forbearance would cease to be a virtue."

"When contempt was flung at this court on Friday, the entire people of one of the greatest States in the Union were insulted, a State which by its loyalty has won the justly earned title of the Volunteer State. Men may become prominent, but they should not feel themselves above the law and above the courts.

"The Judge sitting in the court may be insignificant, but the dignity of the court must be preserved, and he who attempts to destroy it does an injustice to all the courts and to good society."

He thereupon ordered that a citation be served upon "the said Clarence Darrow" to appear in court tomorrow morning and show cause why he should not be held in contempt, and that, meanwhile, he give $5000 bonds for his appearance at that time.

Asks About Bond.

Darrow, who sat through the reading with a grim and impassive face, arose at the conclusion and calmly inquired if he must give the bond immediately. The Judge said it would not be necessary until the citation was served.

"I don't know whether I could give it," Darrow remarked with sour humor.

"Oh, I guess you could give it, Colonel," the Judge rejoined.

One of the local defense attorneys nudged Darrow and told him the bond would be forthcoming.

Counsel immediately engaged in a long argument on the subject whether or not the statements of the scientists and other experts prepared for the record should be read in open court, or should be merely filed with the court stenographer, Attorney-General Stewart said:

"We want to retain such semblance of legal proceedings as there are left in this case. We don't want to see this Court turned into a chautauqua."

"The only effort to make a chautauqua out of it has been made by that member of the prosecution who is in the chautauqua business," retorted Arthur G. Hays of defense counsel, with a gesture toward W. J. Bryan.

"We are objecting to an offer which is intended solely to carry on what the defense calls a campaign of education and what we call propaganda in this community," Stewart continued.

Exchanges by Counsel.

"We have no such intention, but if it should result in a little intelligent thinking, it probably wouldn't do any harm," countered Hays.

"If it led to unintelligent thinking, though, it might do some harm," said Stewart.

Bryan interrupted to declare that if the purpose of presenting the statements was to make a record for the Supreme Court, the prosecution would have no right to reply, but that if they were intended to convince the court that he had erred in holding the law constitutional, and that he should reverse himself, then the prosecution should be allowed to reply.

Bryan was still obviously obsessed by a desire that the statements of the scientists should not go up to the Supreme Court uncontradicted in some way by the prosecution. As on Friday he continued to speak of "an ex-parte trial before the higher court." This peculiar objection was not shared by the other prosecution counsel.

"Mr. Bryan is falling into the same error that he betrayed the other day," replied Dudley Field Malone. "He objects to the introduction of this testimony, and induces the court to exclude it and then he asks for the same right of cross examination or argument that he would have been entitled to if the testimony had been admitted.

Usual Large Crowd Flocks to Courtroom at Dayton.

Interest in the trial showed no signs of flagging today. The usual large crowds flocked to the Rhea County courtroom long before the hour of convening. The auditorium was comfortably filled half an hour before time to call the court to order.

On each counsel table lay a large cardboard sheet, whose top bore the title in black type: "Canons of Professional Ethics." The canons were listed in 32 divisions beginning with one which read:

"The duty of the lawyer to the courts. It is the duty of the lawyer to maintain towards the courts a respectful attitude, not for the sake of the temporary incumbent of the judicial office, but for the maintenance of its supreme importance."

The declaration was without announced authorization, save this explanation at the bottom of the sheet:

"These are rules for the conduct of lawyers generally agreed upon and posted by members of this bar that you may know what to expect of the lawyer."

"Floor Likely to Give Way."

When at the scheduled hour of the court opening, Judge Raulston had not arrived, the crowd looked to be the largest of the trial thus far.

As Judge Raulston entered and struggled through the crowd to his place, the bailiff hammered on the desk and announced in a loud voice:

"Now, all you people who are standing will have to get out of the room. This is an old building and the floor is likely to give way any minute."

The crowd laughed and those without seats began moving toward the door.

"If you don't get out, we'll have to put you out," the bailiff added.

The crowd was thinned out until only a few were standing. At 9:40 o'clock the spectators were orderly and wondering at the delay.

An electric drop wire sparkled and smoked. Volunteers disconnected the wire while spectators shouted advice. The odor of burned insulation filled the hall. Bryan told a story and his assistants rocked with laughter.

Judge Raulston hammered on the table and cried:

"If you want any pictures take them now. You won't have time after court opens."

Opening Prayer Delivered.

The Rev. R. Standerfer, pastor of the Clinton, Tenn., Methodist Episcopal Church, South, offered the opening prayer. The preacher has been in the Methodist ministry 49 years.

Dr. Standerfer asked for the "guiding, directing presence" of God.

After the Judge had read his statement citing Clarence Darrow for contempt the case proceeded, the defense offering a certified copy of the Governor's message to the Legislature approving the bill. The State objected to the introduction of the document.

Judge Raulston excluded the message. The defense also offered in evidence the text book of biology adopted by the State Text Book Commission. Arthur G. Hays read what this text book says of Charles Darwin. Hays said the purpose of the defense was to show the public policy of the State. The State again objected. Judge Raulston ruled that the book might be filed "for the present."

A mild controversy developed between defense and State counsel as to the presentation of statements of scientific witness. The question at issue was as to whether the statements should be submitted without reading, or have portions read to the court.

Defense Contention.

The defense contended that it should be permitted to read these statements to the court in the hope that the court might be convinced of error in having held the law unconstitutional.

The debate went back and forth for an hour; A. G. Hays, Attorney-General Stewart, W. J. Bryan, Dudley Field Malone and Clarence Darrow taking part in the discussion.

LOCAL OPERATORS TO RECEIVE TOLL CALLS UNDER NEW PLAN

Only City and Number Need Be Given—Added Speed to Long-Distance Service Is Object.

Telephone users in St. Louis, beginning today, can give long-distance calls of the kind known as "station-to-station" to the local operator who says, "Number, please," when they lift the receiver. "Person-to-person" calls must be handled through the special long-distance operators, as before.

A person calling can give the number of the telephone he wishes to be connected with in Walla Walla, Wash.; Bangor, Me.; Jefferson City, or anywhere else in the nation (if he knows the number), to the local operator, who will do the rest, ringing the caller when the connection is ready.

This service is expected to speed long-distance calls, especially for business establishments, which frequently have the numbers of distant telephones available. Calls handled in this way are taken only when nothing but the city and number is given. In the case of a call for a particular station of a private branch exchange, it must be placed through the long-distance operator as a "person-to-person" call, a rule which applies also when a particular person at a number is asked for.

For some time St. Louis telephone users have been able to make calls to Belleville, Alton, St. Charles, Valley Park, Creve Coeur, Edwardsville, Collinsville and Edgemont through local operators.

MASSEY WILSON QUITS POST WITH INTERNATIONAL LIFE

Retires as Chairman of Board to Devote Time to Personal Business.

Massey Wilson has retired as chairman of the board of directors of the International Life Insurance Co., which has offices at 722 Chestnut street, and will devote himself to personal business and investments.

Wilson said his retirement was made possible by the consolidation of the International Life and the Standard Life Insurance Co. of Decatur, Ill., which brought experienced executives to direct the new enterprise.

Wilson, a former Attorney-General of Alabama, came to St. Louis 17 years ago and took charge of the International Life, then a very small company. Since then the International Life, under his management, has accumulated $40,000,000 in assets and has $300,000,000 insurance in force, according to its reports.

ATTEMPTS SHOOTING IN C

Wife Tries to Kill Man Seeking to Divorce Her.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, July 20.—Mrs. Della Keating of Denver made an unsuccessful attempt at the County Courthouse today to shoot her husband, Stephen Keating, when his divorce suit against her was called before Judge Lucas.

Deputy Sheriffs wrested a .45 caliber revolver from Mrs. Keating's hands when she drew the weapon from beneath a shawl and thrust it against Keating's side. No shots were fired. Keating obtained a divorce by default on July 2, but the decree was set aside by Judge Lucas at Mrs. Keating's suggestion.

Mrs. Keating was sitting in the corridor when the case was reopened today. When Keating approached the courtroom with his attorney, Mrs. Keating called him aside and said:

"You'll never treat another woman this way," as she drew the revolver from under the shawl. Deputies rushed to the scene and relieved her of the weapon. She was turned over to county authorities for action. Keating said he was Mrs. Keating's fourth husband.

HEARING ON POSTAL RATES

Receipts Under Recent Increase far Short of Estimates.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The controversy over postal rates was reopened today by a joint Congressional Committee which first heard a Postoffice Department estimate that the new rates inaugurated April 15 had fallen far short of producing the additional revenue expected.

Postmaster-General New told the committee that for the month of May, the first full month of operation for the new rates, postal revenues were estimated to have increased only $4131 or .0091 per cent over the total that might have been expected under the old rate. He said the figures necessarily were incomplete.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia" is Far Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent bottles, any drug store.

JUDGE MIX TAKES BENCH IN CRIMINAL DIVISION OF COURT

Appoints Guy A. Thompson to Defend Alleged Forger and Fines Negro "Gun Toter" $50.

Circuit Judge Mix, in his first day of service in the criminal division of the court, today appointed Guy A. Thompson, former president of the Missouri Bar Association, to defend an alleged forger who was without an attorney. As head of the association, Thompson was instrumental in initiating the movement to investigate and remedy the delays in criminal justice, but his practice has been confined largely to civil cases.

"Here's a chance for some of our lawyers who are constantly complaining about delays in criminal justice," said Judge Mix when informed that this defendant was without counsel. "I'll appoint Guy A. Thompson to defend him. He will be well represented; Mr. Thompson is a good lawyer."

The case, which was set for July 30, is that of John Bennett, charged with two small forgeries. He has served a term in the Illinois penitentiary for forgery. Thompson said he would defend Bennett.

The last experience of Judge Mix in criminal jurisprudence was as Police Judge, handling misdemeanor cases. He was known in Police Court for his caustic comments and suggestions. Today he served notice on attorneys that it was going to be hard for them to get cases continued in his court. In fining a negro "gun toter" $50 today, he told the man: "After this, remember the name of Mix; it's short. If you come back here again I'll give you the maximum."

MERCURY TABLETS TAKEN BY MISTAKE RESULT IN DEATH

J. F. Parker, Barber, Took Them for Headache Tablets July 11.

Mistaking bichloride of mercury for headache tablets caused the death of John F. Parker, 64 years old, a barber, of 1012A Madison street, who died at city hospital Saturday night.

Parker was taken to the hospital on July 11, telling physicians he took the mercury by mistake on the night of July 10, but had been unable to arouse other persons at his rooming house or summon medical aid. The poisoning had progressed too far to yield to treatment.

IDENTIFIED IN HOLDUP CASE IN WHICH MAN WAS SLAIN

Confessed Robber Said to Have Been One of Men Who Fatally Shot Daniel Hannefin.

One of two men, who confessed yesterday that they robbed Fred Julian, a chauffeur for the Union Tea Co. of East St. Louis, of $149 in cash in two holdups last October, was identified today as one of three robbers participating in an unsuccessful holdup attempt at the Home Ice Cream Co., Ridge avenue and Twentieth street, on July 5, during which Daniel Hannefin, an employe of the concern, was fatally shot.

The men were arrested last Friday as suspects in the killing of Hannefin. Both denied knowledge of the crime, stating they had returned to East St. Louis last week from Texas. An employe of the ice cream company, however, identified one of the men as participating in the holdup attempt in which Hannefin was shot. They are said by the police to have readily admitted robbing Julian, from whom $35 was taken on Oct. 16, and $114 a week later. Warrants will be applied for on the robbery charge today.

COOLIDGE ACTIVELY HELPING BUTLER AND WADSWORTH

Only Hope President Has of Succeeding Self Hinges Largely on Two Senate Contests in East.

PLANS TO PLACATE THE NORTHWEST

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 20.—By his vacation activities President Coolidge has brought to light the second phase of the Republican party's plan to strengthen its position in the next congressional elections and thereby smooth the way for another easy victory in the presidential campaign of 1928. Success of the President's efforts hinge upon the return of Senator Butler, Republican, Massachusetts, with a good plurality over former Senator David I. Walsh and the re-election of Senator Wadsworth, Republican, in New York.

The strategy mapped out by the President and party leaders is to restore the Northwest, with the gradual betterment of farm conditions, to conservative Republican doctrine and to demonstrate the continued Republican prestige in the East by noteworthy triumphs in the important States of Massachusetts and New York, the first because of the close association of the President to the contest and the second because possible presidential contender is expected to challenge Senator Wadsworth's re-election.

Coolidge Aid Forthcoming.

Even before the issues are drawn apprehension of the G. O. P. chiefs in the East has centered on New York and Massachusetts. President Coolidge evidenced his own concern about his home State by his frequent consultations with Senator Butler and his trips out from Swampscott in company with the Senator, who is laying the foundation for his campaign by attempting to build up an extensive acquaintanceship.

The President and his campaign manager have been appearing in public together at every opportunity and their close friendship is being called to the attention of Massachusetts by a flood of photographs for which Mr. Coolidge has been a willing poser.

The effect is to let everyone in Massachusetts know Butler is the administration choice and the theory of the Butler campaign is that Massachusetts Republicans respond with regularity when they are certain the administration has spoken.

Situation Undergoes Change.

When the President reached Swampscott it was being whispered about the State Butler probably would not seek re-election because a defeat by former Senator Walsh seemed inevitable, and the President consequently would be put in the embarrasing situation of having been repudiated at home because of a rebuke to his campaign manager.

The situation is now changed. Everyone knows Butler is all but an announced candidate, with the election more than a year hence and his closest friends make clear he is in the race to win. Walsh, meanwhile is remaining silent, but active. His last defeat is attributed to his failure to leave Washington and accept various small invitations and he is renewing his extensive acquaintanceship over the State.

Democrats concede he must get Republican votes to win and neutral observers of Massachusetts politics give him an edge in the race because of his long list of friends and because of Butler's smaller acquaintance among the younger elements of the Republican party who always have been attracted to Walsh.

Other important factors in the race are the Lodge following, which is still riled because of the cold shoulder given the late Senator at the Cleveland convention and the tariff. The wage situation in the textile industry has emphasized a demand in New England for reopening the tariff which the President seeks to avoid. If he adheres to this decision it may hurt Butler, since it will deprive him of his high-tariff argument against the Democratic party.

New York Contest Important.

President Coolidge's interest in the New York contest a year from next fall has been made obvious by the appointment of organization men in the face of hints that he intended to chastise Senator Wadsworth for failure to support one or two of his pet measures and the light touch he has kept with

PLANS TO PLACATE THE NORTHWEST

PINCHOT'S 'GIANT POWER' PLAN URGED ON ALL CONGRESSMEN

Calls for Enormous Output of Electricity for Service of All at Cheaper Cost.

By the Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 20.—Gov. Pinchot has extended his "giant power" campaign into every congressional district in the United States. He has sent a copy of the report of the giant power survey in Pennsylvania to each member of Congress and with it a letter in which he told the Congressmen that his purpose in sending the report was "the hope that it may be of use of you in the widespread consideration of giant power which is coming."

"Giant power," the Governor's letter said, "is a plan for supplying electric current for every purpose to people of America in greater abundance and at cheaper rates than ever before. It includes the production of electricity, in enormous quantities, partly from water powers, but chiefly at huge coal burning central power stations near the mouths of mines; the pouring of that electricity as it were, into a great pool of power for the service of all; and the saving of the valuable by-products of coal burned for power. It aims to assist and hasten the rapid expansion of electric service.

"The giant power plan undertakes to prevent the nation-wide electric monopoly now almost formed from acquiring industrial, commercial, financial and political control of this nation. It does not aim at public ownership, but demands that in all plans for electric development, the public interest shall receive first consideration."

FRANCE FACES YEARS OF ECONOMY, SAYS CAILLAUX

Price Nation Must Pay for Financial Salvation, Minister Declares.

By the Associated Press.

MAMERS, France, July 20.—Years of economy is the price France must pay for her financial salvation, M. Caillaux, Minister of Finance, said yesterday at a dinner given in his honor at his home town on the eve of the gold coupon loan. France's debt, he said, went from 30,000,000,000 francs before the war to 300,000,000,000 today. And economy must be practiced "because of the 130,000,000,000 later deficits; the brakes must be put on; the people must stop their too free spending."

A nation which had the courage to throw out governments that would not adopt a firm financial policy, the Minister went on, would have the courage to listen to him when he said to them: "The financial condition of France demands that for years there must be vigilant reduction of expenses and continued sacrifices."

TO CONSIDER BRITISH DEBT

French Commission of Experts Will Go to London.

Copyright, 1925, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, July 20.—With a view to settlement of France's foreign debts, a committee of experts will go to London within a week to open a discussion with representatives of the British Treasury.

Negotiations with Washington, it is expected, will begin before the end of August or early in September.

Rumania's Crude Oil Production.

BUCHAREST, July 20.—Official announcement was made today that Rumania's crude oil production for the first six months of 1925, was 957,994 metric tons. This was 100,000 tons more than the production during the same period last year. It is stated that the daily production is the highest in the history of the country.

$19,000,000 Saved by Calles.

MEXICO CITY, July 20.—It is announced that more than $19,000,000 have been saved by economies in President Calles' 1925 budget. In the War Department alone $9,000,000 have been saved through the President's retrenchment plans.

Charles D. Hilles, National Committeeman, whose call to White Court last week followed other visits to the White House.

It is pointed out that the prestige of Mr. Coolidge's administration would be shattered by a Democratic triumph in the Empire State in 1926 and that any ambition he may have of succeeding himself or naming his successor would be interfered with seriously.

Interest attached to Hilles' statement after seeing the President, that there is no movement under way to appoint a new national chairman because it manifests a desire of the President to control of the National Committee during the congressional campaign and direct the policies.

Butler, consequently, will have the advantage of the national organization behind him when he goes into the contest that is certain to attract national attention.

With obvious interest but with his own conclusions shielded, President Coolidge listened yesterday to an arraignment of the Dayton trial as a "pitiful" drama, and to a denunciation of attempts to make science divide religion, delivered by the Rev. Dr. Charles P. Beale, occupying the pulpit of the Tabernacle Congregational Church in Salem. Dr. Beale emphasized that there is no quarrel between science and religion.

The President was accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, who joined in the singing of the hymns, and by Frank W. Stearns.

TURKEY ASSAILS ADMINISTRATION OF IRAK MANDATE

Angora Requests League to Place Overseer in Mosul District Until Council Makes Decision.

SWEEPING CHARGES AGAINST BRITISH

GENEVA, July 20.—Charges by the Turkish Government, adding complications to the Mosul award, probably will necessitate a second investigation, it was disclosed at the League of Nations headquarters yesterday, after the Turkish communication had been transmitted to members of the Council.

The charges from Angora are sweeping, but evidently are only a preliminary statement of grievances, inasmuch as the New York World and Post-Dispatch correspondent is informed that the Turks paid a huge sum to an alleged Russian renegade for secret British documents dealing with the administration of the Irak mandate. The British planned to publish the documents in a white book.

Intimidation Alleged.

In her note Turkey declares that inhabitants of certain districts beg the Commission to guarantee them freedom from molestation by the British. It is requested that the League station an overseer in the pro-Turkish district until the Council makes its final decision.

This is impossible, since the Council has no power. The Turks, however, charge that tribesmen have been intimidated, molested and imprisoned even during the Commission's visit to the disputed district. Teleki Wirsen and Col. Paulis, members of the Commission, were aware of this situation, they claim.

Hundreds of Mosul natives declare they were imprisoned at Bagdad and Mosul village by the president because of their Turk sympathies.

Six Reported Murdered.

Safer Agha, a pro-Turkish official, together with two servants and three children were murdered as reprisal, the Turks charge, because of agitation against the British. They further allege that the village of Navora-Sissi was destroyed, 1200 refugees fleeing into Turkey June 10. Several localities, they say, including those occupied by Zedki and Doski tribes, were bombed by the British from the air.

The British reply to the League admits the air raids, but declares they were justified for the maintenance of order and public security. The reply states that a full report on the Turkish charges is forthcoming from Sir H. Dobbs, high commissioner to Mosul. The matter will be threshed out when the Council meets in September.

FARM BUREAUS TO FIGHT HIGHER FREIGHT RATES

Declare 11 Per Cent Increase Would Add $95,000,000 to Bill of Farmers.

CHICAGO, July 20.—The petition of 73 Western railroads for an 11 per cent increase in freight rates will meet the organized opposition of the American Farm Bureau Federation, it was announced yesterday by officers of the organization, following a conference here. Farm bureaus in 22 states affected by the increase will be mobilized in the fight.

"To talk of raising rates is madness," declared O. F. Bradfute, president of the federation. "Farmers of the West and Midwest are now finding present high rates a real obstacle in the way to their economic recovery. The Farm Bureau will fight the proposal until it is killed."

Hearings on the petition of the railroads before the Interstate Commerce Commission have been set for Sept. 1.

The proposed increase would add $180,000,000 to the annual freight bill of the state affected, of which $95,000,000 would be paid directly by the farmers, said O. W. Sandberg, transportation director of the bureau.

Mine Breaks Day's Output Record.

DUQUOIN, Ill., July 20.—With a hoist of 8678 tons in eight hours the St. Louis-New Orleans mine of the Chicago, Wilmington & Franklin Coal Co., has again smashed a world's record for output in one day. The previous record of 8664 tons was established some months ago by the Valier mine. The new record is all the more remarkable in that nearly two hours' time was lost during the eight hours by operation delays.

CHAPTER VII.

MORE than eight months passed before another bank was robbed by mysterious Missourians. The snows had melted from the grave of Jolly Wymore, spring and summer had brought their gifts of grass and flowers, autumn's early frosts had begun to drift leaves upon the mound. Gone but assuredly not forgotten were the Liberty Bank raiders. They had ridden straight back into nowhere whence they came. Apparently, so far as Liberty was concerned, the incident was closed.

But late in October of that year, 1866, five horsemen entered the battle-scarred town of Lexington and drew rein near the banking house of Alexander Mitchell & Co. It was noon. Business had yielded to the invitation of the dinner-bell. The bank was deserted. Cashier J. L. Thomas, having nothing else to do, stood in the doorway looking idly across the street, chewing a quill toothpick.

Disinterestedly, the cashier watched the five men dismount and hitch their horses in an adjacent alley. He observed that all the horses were fine-lookers. Two of the men walked slowly toward the bank. The cashier went back behind his counter; evidently a bit of banking business was in the offing.

The two strangers advanced to the cashier's window. One drew forth a $50 bond which may or may not have been of the valuable papers missing from the Liberty bank. In those days U. S. bonds of $50 and $100 were used, at convenience, like ordinary currency.

"Can you change this for me, if you please, sir?" requested the holder.

"I reckon I can," the cashier replied, pleasantly.

He opened the cash drawer and was fingering some currency when he glanced up and saw four big revolvers pointed directly at his head. Two more men had appeared in the doorway with Colt's navies not concealed.

Cashier Thomas recalled the Liberty affair and accepted the situation with as much calmness as he could muster. "Now give us all the money you have in the bank," suavely demanded the man who had asked for the change. "Do it quietly and quickly and you won't be hurt; but if you don't you'll get your head blown off."

Thomas complied quietly and quickly.

"All right; thanks," said the polite robber, tossing the loot into a wheat sack held open by the man standing at his side. "Now don't you give an alarm, for if you do you'll be too dead to know it." The two men backed to the door, keeping the cashier covered with their weapons. The two at the door backed away, pocketing their pistols. The four of them walked at normal gait into the alley, where the fifth had remained, looking after the horses. They all unhitched, mounted, turned into the street and rode out of town without any ado.

They may have been ex-guerillas—most probably they were—though none of them uttered the terrifying yell. It was a quick and quiet affair throughout. Cashier Thomas waited until the clatter of the hoofs had died almost to silence before he walked out and informed the neighboring merchants that those five horsemen had robbed the bank of all the cash on hand, $2000.

It was an hour or so before a dozen Lexington men found mounts and set out in the direction taken by the robbers. The posse spent a couple of days in riding about the country, making various inquiries, striking a possible trail here and there. Nothing came of the pursuit, save weariness and vexation.

Public meetings were held in Lexington, the idea being that something should be done about the matter. Country banks should be safeguarded, if possible, against such incursions. There was the Liberty affair, where the bank lost $72,000 and a fine young man was murdered. These two James boys of Clay County, wild young fellows by reputation, had been suspected at Liberty; well, probably they and their gang had robbed the Lexington Bank. Beyond that, nobody had a theory. After a few weeks [illegible] easy horseback ride east of Liberty and southeast of the James boys' home. Savannah, seat of Andrew county, where the daylight bank robbers made their third appearance, is a couple of days' journey by dirt road to the northwest of the Samuel farm. Four months intervened between the Lexington and the Savannah affairs. The private bank of Judge McLain was the financial stronghold of Savannah. On March 2, 1867, five horsemen rode leisurely into the little town. The hour was 12 o'clock, almost the same to the minute as the time of the Lexington robbery. As at Lexington, most of the townspeople were indoors at dinner.

Judge McLain and his son were in the bank, nobody else being present until four of the five strangers entered, the fifth being left to guard the horses hitched at a rack near by. Apparently Banker McLain had in mind the Lexington affair. Reasoning from analogies, he figured that it must be the same gang on a similar errand. The banker was a man of nerve. Without waiting for his visitors to make initial demonstration, he slammed shut his safe door, snatched his pistol from its shelf under the cash counter, and began firing at the quartet as rapidly as he could cock his weapon and pull the trigger. A brave man, a bad marksman!

The four men drew their weapons at the moment that Judge McLain drew his. All returned his fire. The wonder is that he was not shot to shreds in that close battle, but he received only one bullet. A ball from a Colt's navy revolver penetrated his breast. He fell heavily to the floor. Meantime McLain's son had rushed out into the street, bullets whizzing about his ears, and cried the alarm. Unharmed, the thwarted robbers ran out to their horses and sped away, along with the fifth rider. They got not a penny of the McLain bank money. Savannah citizens were somewhat quicker than had been the Lexingtonians; mounts were found almost immediately, and the fugitives were pursued by a few men. By mid-afternoon nearly all the horses in town and a number from outlying farms had enraged citizens aboard and were galloping out some road. Groups were absent on the trail for several days, but nobody was caught.

Men named Samuel Pope and William McDaniels, the latter being known to his cronies as Bud, were arrested upon suspicion. They set up alibis and went free. Bud McDaniels, a Kansas Cityan, if not a member of the James-Younger gang then became one later; and he will reappear in this narrative, and disappear tragically. [illegible]

In the matter of fatalities resulting from the Richmond bank robbery of May 23, 1867, this was the reddest of all the raids allegedly ridden upon by the James-Younger combine. Deaths of at least eight persons may be traced thereto.

If the Lexington and Savannah fives were one and the same quintet, as appearances suggested, then it is in order to surmise that the Liberty and Richmond dozens were the same men, with a couple added in the latter affair. Some citizens averred that they counted 14 men in the gang of robbers and murderers who invaded Richmond.

This outfit, mounted on fast horses and emitting the unmistakable rebel guerilla yell, dashed into town firing right and left. Citizens ducked and darted hither and yon. Six of the mounted miscreants halted at the Hughes & Mason Bank, the doors of which had been closed and locked when the yelping devils were heard from afar.

With the other members of the gang sitting their horses hard by and keeping up the shooting and the hooting, the six broke into the bank and found about $4000, which they crammed into the customary sack. Out again, they rejoined their accomplices, who by now were having much less fun than they enjoyed at first.

Mayor Shaw of Richmond was the chief official hero of the tragic day. He found somewhere a hefty sixshooter and dashed across the street to a point where other citizens who showed fight seemed to be gathering. Apparently it was the Mayor's purpose to take leadership of this impromptu posse. Before he reached the [illegible] he was observed by three of the yelling riders, who charged [illegible] him. perfect alibi, it being proved that he was working at an honest job in Kansas City when the raid took place. Later he removed to Northern Texas and became a prosperous citizen. At this writing Parmer is one of the small group of survivors of Quantrill's so-called brigade.

Three days after the Richmond tragedy, and on the day of the funerals of the three local victims, a posse of about 20 men from Kansas city learned that Payne Jones was at a certain house near Independence and went out after him that night. It was a rainy night of pitchy darkness. A little girl named Noland was taken along as guide. Members of the posse surrounded the house quietly, but Jones discovered their presence. He flung open a door and bolted out, a double-barrel shotgun in his hands and two Colt's six-shooters in his belt.

The desperado discharged both barrels of his gun before the startled possemen could appreciate the situation. B. H. Wilson, a young member of the posse, was killed and the Noland girl wounded so seriously that she died in a short time. Jones threw down his shotgun, drew his pistols and made for the woods. He was pursued for some miles. Many shots were fired in the darkness by both Jones and his pursuers but none found a living target. Payne Jones was murdered some years later by a former guerrilla comrade who bore him a grudge.

The night following the Payne Jones tragedy a posse of Richmond men ran down Richard Burns. BERLIN, July 20.—The allied occupation of the Ruhr, which has made Germany's rich coal district a sore spot in Europe since the Poincare Government of France seized it in January, 1923, to impress upon Germany her obligations under the Versailles treaty, is rapidly but quietly coming to an end.

Every morning before dawn, so that clashes with the German populace may be avoided, French and Belgian troops are withdrawing from their barracks and moving across the Rhine into the zone whose occupation was provided by the peace treaty.

Leave Essen in Few Days.

Recklinghausen, Gladbeck, Herne and Hattingen were evacuated Saturday. Bochum and Gelsenkirchen were evacuated yesterday. The occupation of Essen and Mulheim will be ended within a few days.

Still occupied are Dusseldorf, Duisberg and Ruhrort, "sanction cities" which, according to the London agreement of March, 1924, could be held until Germany lived up to her agreements under the Dawes plan. But both French and Belgian authorities have given assurances that these cities also will be evacuated by Aug. 15, the date fixed by the London agreement.

The 23,000 troops are expected to be out of the Ruhr by July 31, but military police will remain to keep nominal control of the area until Aug. 15, when the German Green police will be permitted to [illegible]

COOLIDGE ACTIVELY HELPING BUTLER AND WADSWORTH

Only Hope President Has of Succeeding Self Hinges Largely on Two Senate Contests in East.

PLANS TO PLACATE THE NORTHWEST

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 20.—By his vacation activities President Coolidge has brought to light the second phase of the Republican party's plan to strengthen its position in the next congressional elections and thereby smooth the way for another easy victory in the presidential campaign of 1928. Success of the President's efforts hinge upon the return of Senator Butler, Republican, Massachusetts, with a good plurality over former Senator David I. Walsh and the re-election of Senator Wadsworth, Republican, in New York.

The strategy mapped out by the President and party leaders is to restore the Northwest, with the gradual betterment of farm conditions, to conservative Republican doctrine and to demonstrate the continued Republican prestige in the East by noteworthy triumphs in the important States of Massachusetts and New York, the first because of the close association of the President to the contest and the second because possible presidential contender is expected to challenge Senator Wadsworth's re-election.

Coolidge Aid Forthcoming.

Even before the issues are drawn apprehension of the G. O. P. chiefs in the East has centered in New York and Massachusetts. President Coolidge evidenced his own concern about his home State in his frequent consultations with Senator Butler and his trips out from Swampscott in company with the Senator, who is laying the foundation for his campaign by attempting to build up an extensive acquaintanceship.

The President and his campaign manager have been appearing in public together at every opportunity and their close friendship is being called to the attention of Massachusetts by a flood of photographs for which Mr. Coolidge has been a willing poser.

The effect is to let everyone in Massachusetts know Butler is the administration choice and the theory of the Butler campaign is that Massachusetts Republicans respond with regularity when they are certain the administration has spoken.

Situation Undergoes Change.

When the President reached Swampscott it was being whispered about the State Butler probably would not seek re-election because a defeat by former Senator Walsh seemed inevitable, and the President consequently would be put in the embarrasing situation of being been repudiated at home because of a rebuke to his campaign manager.

The situation is now changed. Everyone knows Butler is all but announced candidate, with the election more than a year hence and his closest friends make clear he is in the race to win. Walsh, meanwhile is remaining silent, but active. His last defeat is attributed to his failure to leave Washington and accept various small invitations and he is renewing his extensive acquaintanceship over the State.

Democrats concede he must get Republican votes to win and neutral observers of Massachusetts politics give him an edge in the race because of his long list of friends and because of Butler's smaller acquaintance among the younger elements of the Republican party who always have been attracted to Walsh.

Other important factors in the race are the Lodge following, which is still riled because of the cold shoulder given the late Senator at the Cleveland convention and the tariff. The wage situation in the textile industry has emphasized a demand in New England for deepening the tariff which the President seeks to avoid. If he adheres to this decision it may hurt Butler, since it will deprive him of his high-tariff argument against the Democratic party.

New York Contest Important.

President Coolidge's interest in the New York contest a year from next fall has been made obvious by the appointment of organization men in the face of hints that he intended to chastise Senator Wadsworth for failure to support one or two of his pet measures and the personal touch he has kept with Charles D. Hilles, National Committeeman, whose call to White Court last week followed other visits to the White House.

It is pointed out that the prestige of Mr. Coolidge's administration would be shattered by a Democratic triumph in the Empire State in 1926 and that any ambition he may have of succeeding himself or naming his successor would be interfered with seriously.

Interest attached to Hilles' statement after seeing the President, that there is no movement under way to appoint a new national chairman because it manifests a desire of the President to control of the National Committee during the congressional campaign and direct the policies.

Butler, consequently, will have the advantage of the national organization behind him when he goes into the contest that is certain to attract national attention.

With obvious interest but with his own conclusions shielded, President Coolidge listened yesterday to an arraignment of the Dayton trial as a "pitiful" drama, and to a denunciation of attempts to make science divide religion, delivered by the Rev. Dr. Charles P. Beale, occupying the pulpit of the Tabernacle Congregational Church in Salem. Dr. Beale emphasized that there is no quarrel between science and religion.

The President was accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, who joined in the singing of the hymns, and by Frank W. Stearns.

PINCHOT'S 'GIANT POWER' PLAN URGED ON ALL CONGRESSMEN

Calls for Enormous Output of Electricity for Service of All at Cheaper Cost.

By the Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 20.—Gov. Pinchot has extended his "giant power" campaign into every congressional district in the United States. He has sent a copy of the report of the giant power survey in Pennsylvania to each member of Congress and with it a letter in which he told the Congressmen that his purpose in sending the report was "the hope that it may be of use of you in the widespread consideration of giant power which is coming."

"Giant power," the Governor's letter said, "is a plan for supplying electric current for every purpose to people of America in greater abundance and at cheaper rates than ever before. It includes the production of electricity in enormous quantities, partly from water powers, but chiefly at huge coal burning central power stations near the mouths of mines; the pouring of that electricity as it were, into a great pool of power for the service of all; and the saving of the valuable by-products of coal burned for power. It aims to assist and hasten the rapid expansion of electric service.

"The giant power plan undertakes to prevent the nation-wide electric monopoly now almost formed from acquiring industrial, commercial, financial and political control of this nation. It does not aim at public ownership, but demands that in all plans for electric development, the public interest shall receive first consideration."

FRANCE FACES YEARS OF ECONOMY, SAYS CAILLAUX

Price Nation Must Pay for Financial Salvation, Minister Declares.

By the Associated Press.

MAMERS, France, July 20.—Years of economy is the price France must pay for her financial salvation, M. Caillaux, Minister of Finance, said yesterday at a dinner given in his honor at his home town on the eve of the gold coupon loan. France's debt, he said, went from 30,000,000,000 francs before the war to 300,000,000,000 today. And economy must be practiced "because of the 130,000,000,000 later deficits; the brakes must be put on; the people must stop their too free spending."

A nation which had the courage to throw out governments that would not adopt a firm financial policy, the Minister went on, would have the courage to listen to him when he said to them: "The financial condition of France demands that for years there must be vigilant reduction of expenses and continued sacrifices."

Rumania's Crude Oil Production.

BUCHAREST, July 20.—Official announcement was made today that Rumania's crude oil production for the first six months of 1925, was 957,994 metric tons. This was 100,000 tons more than the production during the same period last year. It is stated that the daily production is the highest in the history of the country.

$19,000,000 Saved by Calles.

MEXICO CITY, July 20.—It is announced that more than $19,000,000 have been saved by economies in President Calles' 1925 budget. In the War Department alone $9,000,000 have been saved through the President's retrenchment plans.

TURKEY ASSAILS ADMINISTRATION OF IRAK MANDATE

Angora Requests League to Place Overseer in Mosul District Until Council Makes Decision.

SWEEPING CHARGES AGAINST BRITISH

GENEVA, July 20.—Charges by the Turkish Government, adding complications to the Mosul award, probably will necessitate a second investigation, it was disclosed at the League of Nations headquarters yesterday, after the Turkish communication had been transmitted to members of the Council.

The charges from Angora are sweeping, but evidently are only a preliminary statement of grievances, inasmuch as the New York World and Post-Dispatch correspondent is informed that the Turks paid a huge sum to an alleged Russian renegade for secret British documents dealing with the administration of the Irak mandate. The British planned to publish the documents in a white book.

Intimidation Alleged.

In her note Turkey declares that inhabitants of certain districts beg the Commission to guarantee them freedom from molestation by the British. It is requested that the League station an overseer in the pro-Turkish district until the Council makes its final decision.

This is impossible, since the Council has no power. The Turks, however, charge that tribesmen have been intimidated, molested and imprisoned even during the Commission's visit to the disputed district. Teleki Wirsen and Col. Paulis, members of the Commission, were aware of this situation, they claim.

Hundreds of Mosul natives declare they were imprisoned at Bagdad and Mosul village by the president because of their Turk sympathies.

Six Reported Murdered.

Safer Agha, a pro-Turkish official, together with two servants and three children were murdered as reprisal, the Turks charge, because of agitation against the British. They further allege that the village of Navora-Sissi was destroyed, 1200 refugees fleeing into Turkey June 10. Several localities, they say, including those occupied by Zedki and Doski tribes, were bombed by the British from the air.

The British reply to the League admits the air raids, but declares they were justified for the maintenance of order and public security. The reply states that a full report on the Turkish charges is forthcoming from Sir H. Dobbs, high commissioner to Mosul. The matter will be threshed out when the Council meets in September.

FARM BUREAUS TO FIGHT HIGHER FREIGHT RATES

Declare 11 Per Cent Increase Would Add $95,000,000 to Bill of Farmers.

CHICAGO, July 20.—The petition of 73 Western railroads for an 11 per cent increase in freight rates will meet the organized opposition of the American Farm Bureau Federation, it was announced yesterday by officers of the organization, following a conference here. Farm bureaus in 22 states affected by the increase will be mobilized in the fight.

"To talk of raising rates is madness," declared O. F. Bradfute, president of the federation. "Farmers of the West and Midwest are now finding present high rates a real obstacle in the way to their economic recovery. The Farm Bureau will fight the proposal until it is killed."

Hearings on the petition of the railroads before the Interstate Commerce Commission have been set for Sept. 1.

The proposed increase would add $180,000,000 to the annual freight bill of the state affected, of which $95,000,000 would be paid directly by the farmers, said O. W. Sandberg, transportation director of the bureau.

Mine Breaks Day's Output Record.

DUQUOIN, Ill., July 20.—With a hoist of 8678 tons in eight hours, the St. Louis-New Orient mine of the Chicago, Wilmington & Franklin Coal Co., has again smashed a world's record for output in one day. The previous record of 8664 tons was established some months ago by the Valier mine. The new record is all the more remarkable in that nearly two hours' time was lost during the eight hours by operation delays.

CHAPTER VII

MORE than eight months passed before another bank was robbed by mysterious Missourians. The snows had melted from the grave of Jolly Wymore, spring and summer had brought their gifts of grass and flowers, autumn's early frosts had begun to drift leaves upon the mound. Gone but assuredly not forgotten were the Liberty Bank raiders. They had ridden straight back into nowhere whence they came. Apparently, so far as Liberty was concerned, the incident was closed.

But late in October of that year, 1866, five horsemen entered the battle-scarred town of Lexington and drew rein near the banking house of Alexander Mitchell & Co. It was noon. Business had yielded to the invitation of the dinner-bell. The bank was deserted. Cashier J. L. Thomas, having nothing else to do, stood in the doorway looking idly across the street, chewing a quill toothpick.

Disinterestedly, the cashier watched the five men dismount and hitch their horses in an adjacent alley. He observed that all the horses were fine-lookers. Two of the men walked slowly toward the bank. The cashier went back behind his counter; evidently a bit of banking business was in the offing.

The two strangers advanced to the cashier's window. One drew forth a $50 bond which may or may not have been of the valuable papers missing from the Liberty bank. In those days U. S. bonds of $50 and $100 were used, at convenience, like ordinary currency.

"Can you change this for me, if you please, sir?" requested the holder.

"I reckon I can," the cashier replied, pleasantly.

He opened the cash drawer and was fingering some currency when he glanced up and saw four big revolvers pointed directly at his head. Two more men had appeared in the doorway with Colt's navies not concealed.

Cashier Thomas recalled the Liberty affair and accepted the situation with as much calmness as he could muster. "Now give us all the money you have in the bank," suavely demanded the man who had asked for the change. "Do it quietly and quickly and you won't be hurt; but if you don't you'll get your head blown off."

Thomas complied quietly and quickly.

"All right; thanks," said the polite robber, tossing the loot into a wheat sack held open by the man standing at his side. "Now don't you give an alarm, for if you do you'll be too dead to know it." The two men backed to the door, keeping the cashier covered with their weapons. The two at the door backed away, pocketing their pistols. The four of them walked at normal gait into the alley, where the fifth had remained, looking after the horses. They all unhitched, mounted, turned into the street and rode out of town without any ado.

They may have been ex-guerillas—most probably they were—though none of them uttered the terrifying yell. It was a quick and quiet affair throughout. Cashier Thomas waited until the clatter of the hoofs had died almost to silence before he walked out and informed the neighboring merchants that those five horsemen had robbed the bank of all the cash on hand, $2000.

It was an hour or so before a dozen Lexington men found mounts and set out in the direction taken by the robbers. The posse spent a couple of days in riding about the country, making various inquiries, striking a possible trail here and there. Nothing came of the pursuit, save weariness and vexation.

Public meetings were held in Lexington, the idea being that something should be done about the matter. Country banks should be safeguarded, if possible, against such incursions. There was that Liberty affair, where the bank lost $72,000 and a fine young man was murdered. These two James boys of Clay County, wild young fellows by reputation, had been suspected at Liberty: well, probably they and their gang had robbed the Lexington Bank. Beyond that, nobody had a theory. After a few weeks the mild excitement subsided, though the personnel of small-town banks throughout that general section of Missouri felt uneasy.

Lexington is on the southern bank of the Missouri river, a day's easy horseback ride east of Liberty and southeast of the James boys' home. Savannah, seat of Andrew county, where the daylight bank robbers made their third appearance, is a couple of days' journey by dirt road to the northwest of the Samuel farm. Four months intervened between the Lexington and the Savannah affairs. The private bank of Judge McLain was the financial stronghold of Savannah. On March 2, 1867, five horsemen rode leisurely into the little town. The hour was 12 o'clock, almost the same to the minute as the time of the Lexington robbery. As at Lexington, most of the townspeople were indoors at dinner.

Judge McLain and his son were in the bank, nobody else being present until four of the five strangers entered, the fifth being left to guard the horses hitched at a rack near by. Apparently Banker McLain had in mind the Lexington affair. Reasoning from analogies, he figured that it must be the same gang on a similar errand. The banker was a man of nerve. Without waiting for his visitors to make initial demonstration, he slammed shut his safe door, snatched his pistol from its shelf under the cash counter, and began firing at the quartet as rapidly as he could cock his weapon and pull the trigger. A brave man, a bad marksman!

The four men drew their weapons at the moment that Judge McLain drew his. All returned his fire. The wonder is that he was not shot to shreds in that close battle, but he received only one bullet. A ball from a Colt's navy revolver penetrated his breast. He fell heavily to the floor. Meantime McLain's son had rushed out into the street, bullets whizzing about his ears, and cried the alarm. Unharmed, the thwarted robbers ran out to their horses and sped away, along with the fifth rider. They got not a penny of the McLain bank money. Savannah citizens were somewhat quicker than had been the Lexingtonians; mounts were found almost immediately, and the fugitives were pursued by a few men. By mid-afternoon nearly all the horses in town and a number from outlying farms had enraged citizens aboard and were galloping out some road. Groups were absent on the trail for several days, but nobody was caught.

Men named Samuel Pope and William McDaniels, the latter being known to his cronies as Bud, were arrested some time later on suspicion. They set up alibis and went free. Bud McDaniels, a Kansas Cityan, if not a member of the James-Younger gang then became one later; and he will reappear in this narrative, and disappear tragically. William Chiles, James White and J. F. Edmunson, former guerillas, also were suspected of complicity in the Savannah failure, but none was apprehended. Judge McLain recovered from his wound and was a local hero for years.

Violent events now were popping fast. Less than three months after Savannah came Richmond. That pleasant little city is the seat of Ray County, immediately east of Clay. It is less than a dozen miles northwest of Lexington. Ray County was to become, in time, an important part of the Jesse James country, with a certain farmhouse near Richmond as intimate center of operations tragic and comic, chiefly tragic. From that lowly homestead, visited time and again by Frank and Jesse James, Jim Cummins and other members of the outlaw fraternity, was to go forth the raw youth whose bullet cut short in early middle age the career of the king-bee bandit; and in the same house, not long before the end of Jesse James, one member of his band was to meet violent death at the hands of another member.

In the matter of fatalities resulting from the Richmond bank robbery of May 23, 1867, this was the reddest of all the raids allegedly ridden upon by the James-Younger combine. Deaths of at least eight persons may be traced thereto.

If the Lexington and Savannah fives were one and the same quintet, as appearances suggested, then it is in order to surmise that the Liberty and Richmond dozens were the same men, with a couple added in the latter affair. Some citizens averred that they counted 14 men in the gang of robbers and murderers who invaded Richmond.

This outfit, mounted on fast horses and emitting the unmistakable rebel guerilla yell, dashed into town firing right and left. Citizens ducked and darted hither and yon. Six of the mounted miscreants halted at the Hughes & Mason Bank, the doors of which had been closed and locked when the yelping devils were heard from afar.

With the other members of the gang sitting their horses hard by and keeping up the shooting and the hooting, the six broke into the bank and found about $4000, which they crammed into the customary sack. Out again, they rejoined their accomplices, who by now were having much less fun than they enjoyed at first.

Mayor Shaw of Richmond was the chief official hero of the tragic day. He found somewhere a hefty sixshooter and dashed across the street to a point where other citizens who showed fight seemed to be gathering. Apparently it was the Mayor's purpose to take leadership of this impromptu posse. Before he reached the spot he was observed by three of the yelling riders, who charged down upon him. The Mayor fired briskly at the trio, but they were too many for him; he went down, the autopsy showing four bullets in his body.

In the county jail, adjoining the courthouse and not far from the bank, were several prisoners who, it was alleged afterward by friends of the suspected ex-guerrillas, were held there because they had continued to express secessionist sentiments. The raiders made a bold attempt to break open the jail and liberate these men. B. G. Griffin, the jailer, and his son, a courageous lad of 15, sought to withstand the assault. The boy got a big revolver and took post behind a tree, from which inadequate shelter he was firing upon the murderous gang when some of them shot him dead. Jailer Griffin saw his son fall; he rushed forward and stood over the boy's body, shooting at the murderers until seven bullets struck him down. Several of his wounds were in vital parts. Father fell dead across dead son.

With their sack of loot the 14 bandits finally galloped out of Richmond, evidently having suffered no injury from citizens' bullets. This outrage aroused the whole county and several counties adjacent, not omitting Clay and Jackson. The Jesse James country stood up on edge. Men of means subscribed to a fund for running down the robbers and murderers. Warrants were issued for eight men who were alleged to have been recognized as members of the gang. These were James White, John White, Payne Jones, Richard Burns, Isaac Flannery, Andrew McGuire, Thomas Little and Allen H. Parmer. Most of them had served under either Quantrill, Bill Anderson or George Todd.

Allen Parmer, who three years later was to become a brother-in-law of the Jameses by marrying Miss Susan L. James, had been one of Quantrill's most deadly marksmen; he made a gory record at the Lawrence Massacre. As to the Richmond affair, Parmer had a perfect alibi, it being proved that he was working at an honest job in Kansas City when the raid took place. Later he removed to Northern Texas and became a prosperous citizen. At this writing Parmer is one of the small group of survivors of Quantrill's so-called brigade.

Three days after the Richmond tragedy, and on the day of the funerals of the three local victims, a posse of about 20 men from Kansas city learned that Payne Jones was at a certain house near Independence and went out after him that night. It was a rainy night, of pitchy darkness. A little girl named Noland was taken along as guide. Members of the posse surrounded the house quietly, but Jones discovered their presence. He flung open a door and bolted out, a double-barrel shotgun in his hands and two Colt's six-shooters in his belt.

The desperado discharged both barrels of his gun before the startled possemen could appreciate the situation. B. H. Wilson, a young member of the posse, was killed and the Noland girl wounded so seriously that she died in a short time. Jones threw down his shotgun, drew his pistols and made for the woods. He was pursued for some miles. Many shots were fired in the darkness by both Jones and his pursuers but none found a living target. Payne Jones was murdered some years later by a former guerrilla comrade who bore him a grudge.

The night following the Payne Jones tragedy a posse of Richmond men ran down Richard Burns. Convinced of his guilt, they took him to a lonely spot far off in the woods. Burns begged for time to pray, which was denied him. He was hanged to a tree. When found a long time afterward, his bones had been picked by crows and buzzards, so runs the tradition. Near Warrensburg, in Johnson County, just east of Jackson, a persistent posse pursued Andrew McGuire and caught him, about a month after the Richmond horror. The small posse resolved itself into a mob and hanged the captive to a tree, without trial.

After being chased like a scared rat from place to place, Thomas Little reached Jefferson City, the State capital, and found a steamboat about to depart for St. Louis. He bought a ticket and went aboard. Somebody at the capital who had recognized Little sent a wire to the St. Louis Chief of Police. The chief received the fugitive as the latter was leaving the boat at the wharf, and placed him in the St. Louis jail. There Little remained until it was considered safe to take him to Warrensburg, his home, where he was wanted on charges of robbing stores. It was not safe, however, for Tom Little. A home-town mob hanged him to a tree in the outskirts.

Suspected of participation in the Richmond crime, but not arrested, William Hulse and John (Jack) Hines of Jackson County disappeared from the State. Cole Younger, whose friends declared he was in Texas at the time of the raid, was named by some persons as a suspect. Both of the Jameses were suspected, both presented evidence toward alibis. The presentation, incidentally, was made by others, Frank and Jesse being discreetly under cover. The historian has found no conclusive evidence for or against either Cole Younger or the James boys.

23,000 SOLDIERS EXPECTED TO QUIT RUHR BY JULY 31

French and Belgians Leave Barracks Before Dawn to Avoid Clashes With German Populace.

TWO MORE TOWNS ARE EVACUATED

Allies Have Agreed That Occupation of "Sanction Cities" Will Be Ended by Aug. 15.

BERLIN, July 20.—The allied occupation of the Ruhr, which has made Germany's rich coal district a sore spot in Europe since the Poincare Government of France seized it in January, 1923, to impress upon Germany her obligations under the Versailles treaty, is rapidly but quietly coming to an end.

Every morning before dawn, so that clashes with the German populace may be avoided, French and Belgian troops are withdrawing from their barracks and moving across the Rhine into the zone whose occupation was provided by the peace treaty.

Leave Essen in Few Days.

Recklinghausen, Gladbeck, Herne and Hattingen were evacuated Saturday. Bochum and Gelsenkirchen were evacuated yesterday. The occupation of Essen and Mulheim will be ended within a few days.

Still occupied are Duesseldorf, Duisberg and Ruhrort, "sanction cities" which, according to the London agreement of March, 1924, could be held until Germany lived up to her agreements under the Dawes plan. But both French and Belgian authorities have given assurances that these cities also will be evacuted by Aug. 15, the date fixed by the London agreement.

The 23,000 troops are expected to be out of the Ruhr by July 31, but military police will remain to keep nominal control of the area until Aug. 15, when the German Green police will be permitted to enter.

Civilians Move Out Rapidly.

Civilians connected with the French and Belgian garrisons are moving out even more rapidly than the troops. Orders have been issued that all shall be out of the area by next Tuesday.

The decision to evacuate the "sanction cities" indicates the French Government has given up its plan, announced June 23, to evacuate to the line of Oberhausen, Mulheim and Kettwig, which would have left the allies with a stranglehold on the Ruhr.

The evacuation will leave allied garrisons on the east bank of the Rhine at only one point, the Cologne bridgehead.

NEW COALITION MINISTRY IN OFFICE IN JUGO-SLAVIA

By the Associated Press.

BELGRADE, July 20.—The new coalition ministry, which has just taken the oath of office, includes Nikola Pachitch as Premier; Gen. Trifounovitch, Minister of War; M. Sloyadinovitch, Minister of Finance, and Dr. M. Ninchitch, Foreign Minister. There are 12 radicals in the new Cabinet, which has been organized with the support of Stefan Raditch, leader of the Croat Peasant party.

The first act of the Cabinet was to sign the release from custody of Raditch and other persons implicated in an alleged conspiracy against the Jugo-Slav Government.

Raditch and his followers were arrested at Agram early last January for alleged connection with the Moscow Third Internationale. Raditch was placed on trial, but acquitted, and was immediately rearrested when the Government claimed to have new evidence against him. He never came to trial again. Parliamentary elections were held, but the Election Commission of the National Assembly invalidated the election of all members of the Peasant party.

A recent dispatch to the Associated Press gave the first inkling of the momentous reunion of these two Jugo-Slav leaders. The Pachitch Cabinet resigned and a coalition ministry was formed, comprising members of both Pachitch and Raditch factions.

Surplus and Tax Reduction.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

AN untenanted round in the ladder of fame awaits some aspirant who will puncture this Federal tax-reduction bubble, and uncover the real tax—that will be retained as long as Chairman Butler's campaign contributors know why they exploit and finance the Republican party.

This candidate for distinction would soon encounter a select band of political lessees, who have acquired, and now appropriate for all it is worth, a valuable party trade mark. He would come in contact with their favorite formula—that the masses innocently believe a specific tax reduction means all tax reduction, and includes everybody; and that the delusion can be put over if the headlines are big enough. The running mate of this excellent principle, established by demonstration, is that when in a contest for special control of taxation, results alone are worthy of esteem, the stupidity of the victim will serve as well as the merit of the psychology that hoodwinks him.

The same exalted plane of logic is maintained by the best minds, in setting forth—but on different days or phases of the moon—first, that this mounting treasury surplus must positively be diminished with lower taxes; second, that a lower tax rate on the big incomes would really produce more revenue, because it would be paid by the owners—all being honorable men; while the present excessive rate is evaded, according to Mr. Mellon, who might know.

But if the inquirer would escape this invincible argument to explore the more inviting field of the teeming, struggling, sweating masses, who are taught to chant that Coolidge will "further reduce taxes," he will meet the people who contribute millions that yield no revenue and exact no receipt. From the sugar in their breakfast coffee to the pillow that welcomes their scurrying bodies at night, they pay taxes, taxes; taxes that go, not to the Federal treasury, but to the authors of the Fordney tariff act, the same being the subscribers to the Republican campaign fund. Why the subscribed was fully explained recently by Mr. Coolidge in his statement on the sugar tax. TOM R. BUCKNER.

History Repeats Itself.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

"LARGE numbers of cases which would ordinarily have come before Courts of Common Law were called before the Star Chamber, simply for the purpose of levying fines for the Crown.

"The same motive accounts for onerous penalties which were exacted for offenses of a trivial character. Vexatious indeed and illegal as were the proceedings of the Crown, there seems in these earlier years of personal rule to have been little apprehension of any permanent danger to freedom in the country at large.

"To those who read the letters of the time there is something inexpressibly touching in the general faith of their writers in the ultimate victory of law.

"King Charles I was obstinate, but obstinacy was too common a foible among Englishmen to arouse any vehement resentment."

Taxing Industry.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN most of our States it is a greater crime to build a chicken house than to rob one. The convicted robber is fined once, but our tax laws fine the builder every year while the house holds together.

Our farmers will have less to complain of when we quit punishing them for planting orchards and raising cattle.

Take any three farms side by side, of equal area and fertility. If the owner of one is industrious and intelligent, keeps his fields well tilled, tries out new breeds and new crops, by which his neighbors benefit; the second is fairly industrious and fairly enterprising; while the third is lazy and shiftless, raising weeds and insect pests which ravage his neighbors' fields and orchards, our tax laws favor the last at the expense of the first.

That is, our tax laws today punish enterprise, thrift and industry and reward idleness and sloth.

If next to these farms is land held idle for speculation, we tax the owner hardly at all.

Yet the speculator injures the community, blocks the wheels of production, makes it necessary for his busy neighbors to haul their produce needless miles to market and enormously increases the cost of building and maintaining roads.

If we tax speculators more and working farmers not at all, our farmers will soon be prosperous.

MAYOR MILLER SCRAPS THE CHARTER.

Before election Mayor Miller proclaimed himself as the embodiment of law enforcement, the bulwark of the City Charter and the uncompromising opponent of political machines. His pledges to enforce the Charter and the laws, to destroy the existing machine at the city hall and to refrain from building up any personal and political machine for himself were frequent and vociferous.

In his campaign platform, which he set up as the palladium of righteous municipal government, he made specific pledges with regard to the enforcement of the laws and avoidance of political favoritism in appointments for the purpose of building up a political machine.

Defining the duties of the Mayor, which he pledged himself to perform conscientiously, he emphasized the duty of seeing that "all law, ordinances and Charter provisions are enforced within the city." In the same document is the specific statement: "I pledge that the taxpayers' money shall not be used by me to build up a political machine, either directly or indirectly."

In his official oath he swore to support "the Charter and ordinances of the city; that I will be influenced only by the consideration of fitness in the appointment, promotion, demotion, suspension or discharge of officers or employes."

After election we find that with regard to the efficiency system provided by the Charter, the Charter is "a scrap of paper." The Mayor's preelection pledges with regard to the support of the Charter, the impartial appointment of officers and employes on merit alone, and his pledge against building up a personal machine, are empty words.

The resignation of Charles Hertenstein, chairman of the Efficiency Board, with his letter of explanation of his action, and the letters of the Mayor submitted as evidence, show that Mayor Miller wants to ignore and violate the Charter and destroy the efficiency system, and make it an instrument for the appointment of his favorites, for the building up of a political machine.

Mr. Hertenstein declares that he cannot retain his office as chairman of the board without violating the Charter or refusing to co-operate with the Mayor; that his position under the Mayor's pressure to violate the provisions of the Charter and destroy the efficiency system is intolerable. He charges that, contrary to his definite pre-election pledge not to disturb any employe in the classified service who is competent and has fully discharged his duties, the Mayor has dismissed faithful and efficient employes without a hearing or specified cause, and has filled their places with his favorites, contrary to law. Six employes of the classified service against whom there were no charges of incompetence or neglect of duty have been dismissed and their places filled without reference to the Efficiency Board.

Mr. Hertenstein charges that the Mayor sent him lists of names of persons he wanted either promoted or appointed through the Efficiency Board. These lists were marked with a code of dots, signifying the degrees of the Mayor's desire to have them taken care of. Explaining this code the Mayor said that the number of dots indicated the degree of his own solicitude for the appointment of the persons to important places.

Mr. Hertenstein further charges that the Mayor asked him to submit a questionnaire to all city employes under the efficiency system, asking them to submit data concerning themselves, including the ward and precinct in which they lived. The only construction he can put upon this is that Mayor Miller wants the assistance of the Efficiency Board in building up a personal political machine, directly contrary to his pledges and the provisions of the Charter.

The Charter provisions are clear and explicit with regard to the efficiency system and the classified service. Article 18, section 12, reads:

> No person in the classified service or seeking admission thereto shall be APPOINTED, reduced, suspended, discharged or IN ANY WAY FAVORED OR DISCRIMINATED AGAINST because of his political or religious opinions or affiliations.

Section 13 of the same article goes beyond this general provision, and makes it a misdemeanor for any person to interfere with the impartial workings of the efficiency system. It reads:

> Any person who shall willfully, by himself or in co-operation with any other person or persons, defeat or deceive or obstruct any person in respect of his right of examination, according to any of the rules prescribed by the Efficiency Board under this article, or who shall willfully or falsely mark, grade, estimate or report upon the examination or proper standing of any person examined hereunder, or aid in so doing, or who shall willfully make any false representations concerning the same, or concerning the person examined, or who shall willfully furnish to any person any secret information for the purpose of improving or injuring the prospects or chances of any person so examined or to be examined, being appointed, employed or promoted, or who shall solicit directly or indirectly any assessment or contribution for any political party from any person in the classified service, shall for each such offense be deemed guilty of misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than $10 and not more than $500, or by imprisonment of not more than 100 days, or by both fine and imprisonment.

It has been said in apology for the Mayor that Mr. Hertenstein's predecessor resigned because he could not agree with Mayor Kiel with regard to the conduct of his office. That incident was thoroughly discussed at the time and has no bearing on the present situation. If Mayor Kiel was wrong, that does not justify Mayor Miller. One wrong does not justify another wrong. Mr. Hertenstein testifies, however, that neither by word nor act has Mayor Kiel ever interfered with the work of the Efficiency Department, and that 3000 employes have been passed through the merit system, and only 10 per cent, due to death, illness or voluntary resignation, have passed from the service.

The one important thing for the consideration of the people of St. Louis is that the evidence in Mr. Hertenstein's testimony and the letters of the Mayor show that Mayor Miller is violating the Charter and the law and his pledges in order to break down the efficiency system, which was regarded as one of the most important provisions of the City Charter, and to build up a personal political machine.

Mayor Miller's only answer to Mr. Hertenstein's charges and the evidence he submits is the appointment of a Miller man to the chairmanship of the Efficiency Board. We presume that the reign of official lawlessness and the building of a Miller political machine will go on merrily, unchecked by regard for the Charter or the conscientious objections of the chairman of the board.

Mr. Hertenstein's statement that the classified service is utterly demoralized goes without saying. What else could be expected when the legal rights and safeguards that were thrown around these employes are broken down and when applicants for positions under the merit system are to be subject to discrimination through favoritism?

Is Mayor Miller willing to have his pledges of fidelity to the Charter and of law enforcement branded as mere devices of hypocrisy and demagoguery to catch votes?

GEN. ANDREWS' RESPONSIBILITY.

Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews is beginning to get a foretaste of the difficulties in store for him as the new director of the prohibition forces, afield and afloat. Through replies to a questionnaire sent out by the Department of Justice to Federal District Attorneys, he has learned that an "alarming" state of nonenforcement exists in many places. Lack of co-operation on the part of some state officials, corruption among Federal agents and a noticeable indisposition of railroad men to convert themselves into dry sleuths are some of the items in the gloomy prospectus drawn up by the reporting attorneys.

Barring the information that the railroad phase of the prohibition problem is bulking unexpectedly large there is nothing of moment in this official appraisal of enforcement conditions that has not long since been discounted by common knowledge. The only significant point is that this common knowledge is now being accepted by responsible officialdom as a true presentment of conditions and is being hallmarked with the magic word "official."

Prohibition enforcement today is probably about what it was, in quality and quantity, a few weeks ago. But whereas we were being soothed a few weeks ago with cheerful, chirrupy outgivings from the throne of Maj. Roy Asa Haynes, to the general effect that—today we are getting some of the facts—officially labeled as facts—from Gen. Andrews. That is the only substantial difference between then and now.

> Haynes is in office,

This change is all to the good. As was pointed out in a recent illuminating article from our Washington bureau, Haynes is an Ohio politician who believes in fairies, while Gen. Andrews is a hard-boiled soldier and a realist. If prohibition is to be enforced at all it will be by men of the Andrews type, who are not willing to deceive either themselves or the public as to the difficulties of enforcement, and not by men of the Haynes type.

The character and record of Gen. Andrews inspire the hope that if, after a fair test of his new enforcement plan, he finds prohibition nonenforceable, he will candidly state the fact, to the end that the nation, through revision of the present fanatical laws and regulations, may enter upon an era of recaptured sanity and respect for law. There rests on Gen. Andrews the immediate responsibility of enforcing the law to the best of his ability. That he will do this admits of no question. Of equal or greater gravity is the prospective duty, if and when his efforts fail, of publishing the truth without evasion.

Both practically and artistically, the chaste 3-dot code of the Mayor had the peaches, apples and apricots of the oil melodrama beaten a mile.

THIS MAN TILDEN.

Can't something be done about this man Tilden? The monotonous regularity with which he wins championships is becoming wearisome. The record books for the last seven years are as full of his name as Tennessee is full of fundamentalists. For five years running he has won the national outdoor singles title. Since 1918 he has won the national clay courts title five times, to say nothing of winning the world's championship at Wimbledon, and a host of small tournaments.

Imagine if you can such domination in any other field of human endeavor. It would be intolerable, oppressive, maddening. The French Bourbons tried it. See what happened to them. Consider also the Romanoffs, the Hapsburgs and the Hohenzollerns. Consider also Bobby Jones, who was recently put in his place by Willie MacFarlane. And John L. Sullivan, and any number of others.

Yet, while in other fields supremacy such as Tilden's meets with deserved disaster, the tennis world seems weakly unrebellious. No racquet in Christendom is raised against Big Bill except in meek expectation of defeat. There was once a hero named Little Bill Johnston who tried to upset this Goliath, and came nearest doing so. There was also an upstart named Vincent Richards, whom Big Bill has reduced to humility. For a while last Saturday it looked as though a Richmond had entered the field. But George Lott was smothered after coming within two points of the championship.

Once more Big Bill struts in solitary grandeur. If his tennis rivals can't do it with racquets, why not try bricks?

Miller's revised version: To Victor belong the spoils.

WHAT WILL BRYAN SAY?

Bobbed hair scores again. Nebraska rural school boards, which had declined to employ young women with shorn tresses, found they had either to revoke the edict or go without teachers. The girls won, of course, and Nebraska was again made safe for the three Rs.

All this happened in the heart of the original Bryan belt. What will the Sage of Coral Gables say to this dangerous dalliance of his former neighbors with a practice unheard of in biblical times? Somehow, we can't conceive of a bobbed-haired young lady—be she school teacher or bandit—as being, in her heart, anything but a modernist. We can't believe that any generation of pupils taught by bobbed-haired teachers will ever follow the example of the Tennessee Legislature.

As we used to say with appropriate libation, in the days before Volsteadism, out of Bryanism, begat the eighteenth amendment, "The ladies—God bless 'em!" In the bobbed-haired ladies on the rostrums of our schoolrooms lies the chief hope of a future without a monkey law. Bob on, girls, bob on!

PANETELA.

Yes, Luella,
Mr. Bryan.
What though eager
For the fray,
In the end
Declined the battle
And discreetly
Ran away.
Rather than Expose his nonsense
To the wisdom
Of his age,
Lo, he whipped up
Rosinante
And neglected
To engage!

What the trouble was,
My dearie,
One at best
Can but surmise;
Probably
He was disheartened
By so many
Laughing eyes,
As a rule
These Don Quixotes
With their servants
And their staffs,
Beat it when
There is amusement
Say if anybody
Laughs.

In the Tennessee
Encounter
One of course
Can understand
That they couldn't
Keep it going
With no more
Than looking bland
While a scientist,
Is hardly
Such as are
To be accused
Of a sense of humor,
Still he
Can look mightily amused

Naturally,
Little girlie,
Mr. Bryan hoped to pierce
Infidelity's defences
Basically
Looking fierce,
Like the very
Wrath of Heaven,
Girt with holiness
About.
What he meant
To do with Science
Was to down it
With a shout.

Therefore,
Having loosed a warhoop
Loud enough
To wake the dead,
And arousing only laughter,
Lo, the scourge
Of Science fled!
Just as dear old
Don Quixote,
Seeing other people glad,
Quit the premises
In dudgeon,
Counting those
About him mad.

"NO SUBSTITUTE FOR GUTS."

From the Baltimore Evening Sun.

MEN of intelligence cowered before the blast of the Antisaloon League. They are cowering in Tennessee before the blast of the fundamentalists. The president of the University of Tennessee dived into his hole like a scared rabbit when the bill was introduced into the Legislature, and he has never emerged. It was difficult to get a Tennessee lawyer to appear for Scopes, and Neal, who did take the case, is regarded as a reckless daredevil. Men who realize the asininity of the whole affair simply cannot stand being referred to by their less intelligent neighbors as atheists and infidels. The spirit of Huxley, who dared face anything in defense of the truth, simply is not in them.

If this moral flabbiness pervades among intelligent men in States other than Tennessee, why should the fundamentalists not win? What is to prevent their writing their religion of darkness into the Constitution of the United States? If they have a monopoly of courage, indeed, are they not entitled to win? No nation has a right to freedom unless and until it is willing to defend its freedom.

It is unjust to lay all the blame on the Holy Rollers. If the republic is in danger of losing its liberty, it is for lack of men who in defense of that liberty are willing to face the worst that ignorance, bigotry and fanaticism can do. If the fundamentalist has all the courage, the fundamentalist is the better man and should win for all the researches of modern science have never discovered any substitute for guts.

FINGERPRINTS.

From the New York Commercial.

HOW a man's fingerprints may serve to save him from conviction was illustrated recently in this city in the case of [illegible] Douglas Mackenzie, charged with crime. The evidence against him was strong. He even looked like the picture of another Douglas Mackenzie, charged on the Pacific Coast with a series of crimes. Even his Bertillon measurements closely approximated those of the wrongdoer wanted in the West. While he denied that he had committed the offenses charged against him, the probabilities were that he would be convicted. Then the fingerprints of the Western man came from the police of California. They were not the fingerprints of the man in New York and the latter was free—although under a suspended sentence, because he had been shown to be guilty of a misdemeanor that called for punishment of some sort. All of which is set forth merely to show that a fingerprint can save a man from punishment as well as bring it about. CARDINAL BEGIN, 85, DIES IN QUEBEC

Primate of Canada Succumbs to Uremia Following a Week's Illness.

By the Associated Press.

QUEBEC, July 20.—The body of Cardinal Begin, Archbishop of Quebec and primate of Canada, who died yesterday, lay in state today in the chapel of the Archbishop's palace.

Next Saturday the son of a humble farmer, who became a prince of the Roman Catholic Church, will be buried in the crypt of the palace.

Despite his 85 years, the Cardinal has resisted with fortitude an attack of uraemia, with which he was stricken a week ago. On Saturday he suffered a relapse. Louis Nazaire Begin, ordained 60 years ago, had been Archbishop of Quebec for 29 years and Cardinal for 11.

The romantic rise of Louis Nazaire Cardinal Begin from the unpretentious surroundings of a Levis farmhouse, where he was born, to membership in the Sacred College of the Roman Catholic Church, is without parallel in the religious history of Canada. It is doubtful if the venerable prelate, when in youth he consecrated his life to the service of his church, ever dreamed of or hoped for the honors that were later to come to him.

Preparing for his ordination, Cardinal Begin apparently had in mind a teaching career, for after he became a priest he spent several years in further studies of special courses to fit him for a place on the faculty of Laval University, Montreal, where he earned his B. A. degree.

During 21 years of teaching Father Begin, as he was then, by his devotion to his duty and to his church won favor at the Vatican and in 1888 was rewarded with appointment as Bishop of Chicoutimi, after three years as head of that see he was appointed Bishop Coadjutor to the late Cardinal Taschereau, Archbishop of Quebec, and became titular Archbishop of Cyrene. In 1894, he was made administrator of the Archdiocese of Quebec.

Cardinal Begin succeeded to the Archbishopric of Quebec upon the death in April, 1918, of Cardinal Taschereau. As head of the diocese he worked energetically to promote the interests of the church and made a practice of visiting annually every parish in the archdiocese, one of the largest territorially in America.

Honored by Pope Pius X.

From the death of Cardinal Taschereau in 1898, the first Canadian prelate to be elevated to the College of Cardinals, his successor as Archbishop of Quebec had been mentioned several times as a possible candidate for the red hat, but it was not until 1914 that the honor was conferred upon Cardinal Begin by Pope Pius X.

While an able administrator of his archdiocese, Cardinal Begin attracted more attention by his strictness as an ecclesiastical disciplinarian and rigidly enforced the regulations of the Catholic church. Likewise, in his later years he was a sturdy and active antagonist of social modernism and a vigorous opponent of modern dancing and jazz. His stand against these was officially indorsed in Rome by an article in Osservatore Romano, the organ of the Vatican.

Cardinal Begin, the son of Charles Begin, a farmer, and Luce Paradis Begin, was born Jan. 16, 1840, at Sarosta, in the parish of Levis, across the river from Quebec. His preliminary education was received at the Levis Model School, the College of St. Michael Bellechasse, the Little Seminary of Quebec and Laval University, Montreal. He was graduated with honors from the last named institution, winning the Prince of Wales medal. He studied theology at the Grand Seminary, Quebec, and later attended the lectures of the Jesuits at the Gregorian University, Rome, where he was ordained in 1865 and received the degree of doctor of divinity.

Interested in Working Classes.

After his ordination the young priest remained two years in Rome to take a special course in ecclesiastical history and Oriental languages and then went to Innsbruck for further study under the Jesuits. Later he visited the Holy Land to obtain first-hand knowledge of the sacred places and to study Holy Script.

Returning to Canada in 1867, Father Begin taught theology at Laval University several years and later became prefect of studies at the Little Seminary, Quebec, director of the Grand Seminary, and then principal of the Laval Normal School. He was serving in the last named position when, in 1888, he was named Bishop of Chicoutimi.

Cardinal Begin was tall and very erect and his simplicity of manner was one of his outstanding characteristics. He always manifested a deep interest in the working classes and frequently acted as arbitrator in disputes between capital and labor. In these controversies he invariably succeeded in obtaining settlements satisfactory to both sides. He was a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada and author of a number of religious works.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

"NO SUBSTITUTE FOR GUTS."

From the Baltimore Evening Sun.

MEN of intelligence cowered before the blast of the Antisaloon League. They are cowering in Tennessee before the blast of the fundamentalists. The president of the University of Tennessee dived into his hole like a scared rabbit when the bill was introduced into the Legislature, and he has never emerged. It was difficult to get a Tennessee lawyer to appear for Scopes, and Neal, who did take the case, is regarded as a reckless daredevil. Men who realize the asininity of the whole affair simply cannot stand being referred to by their less intelligent neighbors as atheists and infidels. The spirit of Huxley, who dared face anything in defense of the truth, simply is not in them.

If this moral flabbiness pervades among intelligent men in States other than Tennessee, why should the fundamentalists not win? What is to prevent their writing their religion of darkness into the Constitution of the United States? If they have a monopoly of courage, indeed, are they not entitled to win? No nation has a right to freedom unless and until it is willing to defend its freedom.

It is unjust to lay all the blame on the Holy Rollers. If the republic is in danger of losing its liberty, it is for lack of men who in defense of that liberty are willing to face the worst that ignorance, bigotry and fanaticism can do. If the fundamentalist has all the courage, the fundamentalist is the better man and should rule, for all the researches of modern science have never discovered any substitute for guts.

FINGERPRINTS.

From the New York Commercial.

HOW a man's fingerprints may serve to save him from conviction was illustrated recently in this city in the case of [illegible] Douglas Mackenzie, charged with crime. The evidence against him was strong. He even looked like the picture of another Douglas Mackenzie, charged on the Pacific Coast with a series of crimes. Even his Bertillion measurements closely approximated those of the wrongdoer wanted in the West. While he denied that he had committed the offenses charged against him, the probabilities were that he would be convicted. Then the fingerprints of the Western man came from the police of California. They were not the fingerprints of the man in New York and the latter went free—although under a suspended sentence, because he had been shown to be guilty of a misdemeanor that called for punishment of some sort. All of which is set forth merely to show that a fingerprint can save a man from punishment as well as bring it about. Here it seems was a case of a remarkable double in name and features that came near sending a man to jail. In former times he would have been convicted. His fingerprints saved him.

FRENCH GIRL ARTIST WINS GRAND PRIX DE ROME

First Woman Painter to Represent Nation in Rome Is Not Yet 21 Years Old.

Copyright, 1925, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Co. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, July 20.—French women are exulting over the latest feminine triumph. Twenty-two of 32 graybeards have awarded the coveted Grand Prix de Rome, — the highest art recompense in France —to a slip of a girl not yet 21 years old, Mlle. Odette Pauvert.

Although not the first woman to win the honor of a sojourn at Villa Medici—one sculptress and two musicians preceded her—she is the first woman painter considered worthy to represent French talent in the Eternal City. The painting which won her the prize is entitled "The Legend of St. Romain."

The girl is an art mystic. She has already painted several religious pictures, one of which won a medal at the last Paris salon.

Outside of her art, Odette Pauvert is a typical modern French girl. She swims almost as well as she paints, and is as much at home in a dance hall as in a studio. She has studied four years at the National School of Fine Arts and has won numerous medals and prizes, besides obtaining a place in the salon for her work every year since 1922, winning in 1923 and 1924 bronze and silver medals.

$25,000 to Be Spent Installing 1000-Watt Broadcasting Set at WEW.

As a result of a gift from the Catholic Laymen's Association of Missouri, St. Louis University's radio station, WEW, is to be converted into a higher powered station by the expenditure of $25,000. A 1000-watt broadcasting set is to be installed.

Although the university was one of the first institutions in this section of the country to undertake regular broadcasting, younger stations have surpassed it in magnitude, it was pointed out by Francis R. Lowther, president of the association, in the announcement of the gift. It is desired to increase the university's ability to broadcast information of an educational and religious nature.

WEW was the first station which the Department of Agriculture authorized to distribute weather, market and stock reports. The new equipment is expected to be ready by autumn.

NEW FILMS

By NIE.

IT may be that the idea we got of "The Light of Western Stars" at the Missouri Theater was a trifle vague. As we were about to enter the show house our attention was distracted by some experts hoisting a safe up to a seventh-floor window across the street. This proved so exciting that when we finally got into the theater the picture was well under way. Then, along somewhere near the finish, we dropped off to sleep and missed a lot more but our impression is that it was a pretty thrilling meller. It seems that Pola Negri, a poor but reasonably honest working girl, was driving up to her place of business at Broadway and Forty-second street when Lew Cody grabbed her and dragged her into his mansion down on Long Island and proceeded to tie her to a four-poster bed with the rope which he always carries for that purpose. Pola put up a stiff battle and her yells for assistance were heard by Tom Mix, who was hanging around the Fourth of July Saloon with his horse Tony out in Arizona. If Pola's honor is to be saved this time Tom has some hard riding ahead of him, especially as he and Tony always avoid the good roads and stumble up and down mountain sides and prefer to swim all rivers instead of trusting themselves to the bridges. Fortunately Lew Cody has a lot of drinking to do and this takes time so that Tom and Tony arrive at the opportune moment and in the battle which follows Tom and Lew roll down the marble stairs a time or two and then Tony ends the fight by planting both his front feet on Lew's face and while Tom and Pola embrace Charley Chaplin falls backward into an open ice-cream freezer to make the customary happy ending. As we remarked at the start perhaps we did not get the picture just right. Maybe Pola and Tom and Lew and Tony and Charley were not in at all. Perhaps it was Billie Dove and Jack Holt and Noah Beery and George Nichols, but anyhow it was that sort of a picture, if you know what we mean.

The Curse of Drink.

JUST what a glass of wine will do to a young wife is ably shown in "The Marriage Whirl" at the Grand Central, Skydome and Capitol theaters. Corinne Griffith is the young wife who has passed up her pop-eyed childhood sweetheart and married a live one to reform him. The husband, instead of being reformed, gets his wife to take a drink and the next thing you know they are in Paris and buying wine faster than the enthusiastic French waiters can open it. This ideal life might have lasted for 10 or 12 reels if the husband hadn't met Nita Naldi, who is advertised as the screen's most sensational vamp. Be that as it may, she lands the husband in her net and takes him for a wild auto ride. He does his best to knock a few taxis out of his path and succeeds so well that he tries to overturn a street car with his auto. Again he is successful but does not survive this triumph and so his wife, now his widow, is at liberty to sign the pledge and marry her pop-eyed boy friend who just happened to be in Paris also. "The Marriage Whirl" is not so good.

Still in the Open Spaces.

"THE WHITE DESERT," at Loew's State, is another Western meller this time with the plains and the mountains and the other familiar spots, where men are so likely to be men, all covered with snow. There are the usual villains and the usual heroes fighting for the love of Claire Windsor and while the story itself is of the ordinary Western type there are some most unusual storm scenes and the destruction of an entire town by an avalanche of snow which is thrilling to the extreme. If you crave excitement you'll like "The White Desert."

From Cigars to Society.

"THE TEASER," at the King's Garden and Rivoli is a bright little picture with a reasonably consistent story and with Laura La Plante, a St. Louis girl, as the star. Miss La Plante, who is moving up in the picture world, has the role of a flapper cigar stand saleagirl who flirts her way into high society and then almost falls out of it again. Pat O'Malley, our leading actor in plumbing and other honest workmen parts, gets into society along with the young woman and they seem likely to be a fixture among the four hundred when the final fadeout comes.

A Dancing Girl's Triumph.

LILA LEE in "The Midnight Girl," heads a double bill at the Delmonte this week. She is cast as a Russian refugee who wins success as a dancing girl in a cafe. She is almost trapped by an aspiring manager in his apartment, but escapes all right—as they do in the movies—and weds his son. Her support, featuring Gareth Hughes, is effective. Another offering in the program is "The Night Ship," a tale of revenge at sea, featuring Mary Carr and Robert Gordon. The plot calls for the blowing up at sea of a ship and the killing of a captain, all of which is done quite handily.

FUNERAL OF MRS. ANNA BUSH

Funeral services for Mrs. Anna M. Bush, widow of Allan C. Bush, who died yesterday after a long illness, will be held at the home of her son, John A. Bush, 6807 Waterman avenue, at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow. Dr. Lewis M. Hale of Springfield, Mo., former pastor of the Delmar Baptist Church, will officiate, and burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mrs. Bush was 71 years old, and for several years had made her home with her son, who is president of the Brown Shoe Co. She is also survived by five daughters, Miss Mildred B. Bush of St. Louis; Mrs. W. L. Shearer Jr. of Boston, Mrs. S. A. Fely and Mrs. F. W. Downer of Newton Center, Mass., and Mrs. C. E. Stouffer of Denver. Another daughter, Florence W. Bush, died in 1904.

Strong Soaps

No soap that is safe for toilet use will "remove" germs any better than Palmolive

If guarding a good complexion is your aim, use a soap made to protect it

There's an idea, we are told, that some soaps combat germs; and others not. That for aseptic reasons certain soaps must be used.

Soaps to "destroy" germs should be used only on advice of a physician. All soaps "remove" germs to a certain degree. No soap suitable for toilet use will "remove" germs any better than Palmolive.

In your own interest, carry that in mind. For beauty's sake, take care. Would you gamble with the good complexion it has taken you probably years to attain?

In old days, women were told, "use no soap on your faces." For soaps were too harsh. Then Palmolive came . . . a soap made of cosmetic oils . . . a soap made to protect the skin.

Women tried it, and found amazingly improved complexions and charm. Palmolive became quickly the leading toilet soap of the world. In France, home of cosmetics, Palmolive is one of the two largest selling soaps. French women have found it their ideal of a soap.

That is because Palmolive is a unique creation, based on 60 years of soap study. It is made solely for the skin.

Palmolive is not intended for laundry use or even for fine fabrics. For to be good for those things, its cosmetic qualities would need be much reduced. And millions of good complexions be thus endangered. As a "germ remover" no other soap suitable for toilet use is more effective.

But Palmolive results don't come from those other soaps. They don't come from strong soaps. They don't come from medicated soaps. Don't expect them. And don't take chances. To protect your beauty, use a soap made to protect it.

Palmolive, we frankly grant, is not the only fine complexion soap. We know of two others. But they cost you 25 cents, while Palmolive costs but 10 cents—no more than ordinary soaps. Enormous production brings you this modest cost.

Wash, launder, cleanse with any soap you wish. But when beauty is at stake, take care. Use Palmolive, a soap you know is safe to use. It is nature's formula to "Keep That Schoolgirl Complexion."

No "Two-Purpose" Soap
Will Bring Palmolive Complexion Results

Palmolive Soap is made for ONE purpose ONLY—to guard your complexion and charm. It is not intended for laundry use, nor even for fine fabrics. To make it good for those things, its cosmetic qualities would need be much reduced. And good complexions are too precious to be thus imperiled.

Don't expect Palmolive results from common soaps. Don't expect them from "jack-of-all-trades" soaps—soaps claiming to be good for scores of different uses. Palmolive is a secret blend of rare cosmetic oils, a scientifically made soap to be used freely and safely on the skin—millions of clear, pretty skins prove Palmolive results.

Note carefully the name and wrapper. Palmolive is never sold unwrapped.

CURTIS CONFERS WITH COOLIDGE

On Three-Day Visit to Discuss Legislative Program; Says Farmer Is Satisfied.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 20.—An optimistic report on farm conditions and the hope for a tax reduction were brought to President Coolidge today by Senator Curtis of Kansas, the Republican leader.

Coming here for a three-day conference with the President, Senator Curtis expected to take up to some extent the administration legislative program for next session. He saw no need for a special session meanwhile.

Good prices and good crops are giving satisfaction to the farmers generally, Senator Curtis said. He based his report on a recent visit to the West, particularly his home State. If any legislation is attempted next session for the farmer, he thought it should provide for some assistance in co-operative marketing.

Senator Curtis introduced a bill last session as did Senator Capper, Republican, Kansas, but he said he had no definite plan now for farm relief legislation other than a suggestion that the Government aid in providing better marketing facilities.

The Republican leader is a member of the Finance Committee and he believes that tax reduction amounting to at least $300,000,000 will be possible. This can be increased to even $500,000,000, he declared, if a reorganization of the Government department is brought about to prevent duplication. Senator Curtis supports in the main the reorganization bill presented last session which provides for a new executive department, but he thinks this program would be carried even further so as to wipe out some of the unnecessary bureaus.

As chairman of the Rules Committee Senator Curtis thinks a revision to some extent is desirable, but he told the executive he did not think the campaign for a general revision of the rules should be allowed to take up the time of the Senate next session with important legislation pending. Vice President Dawes now is conducting a public campaign for revision of the Senate rules.

In regard to a possible special session of Congress should an emergency arise in the anthracite coal wage discussion the Republican leader said that bridge would have to be crossed when it was reached. He believed a suspension of activities in the anthracite coal fields could be averted before the present wage agreement ends on Aug. 31.

Senator Curtis was joined at White Court by Mr. and Mrs. David Mulvane, who also were guests of the President and Mrs. Coolidge at luncheon. Mulvane is Republican National Committeeman from Kansas and he is spending the summer near here. Senator Curtis came here from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Webster Knight II, at Narragansett Pier, R. I.

Coolidge also received this morning Matthew Hale, former progressive party leader in this State in the 1912 campaign, and R. B. Metcalf of Boston, who was a schoolmate of the President at Amherst.

I. C. C. DELVES INTO PERSONAL AFFAIRS OF VAN SWERINGENS

Large Sums Borrowed From Cleveland Corporation to Acquire Control of Nickel Plate.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—All Attempts to limit the inquiry into the personal affairs of O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen were abandoned today when the Interstate Commerce Commission resumed consideration of the Nickel Plate Railroad consolidation plan.

O. P. Van Sweringen, who was on the stand when the hearings were adjourned recently, returned to the witness chair, and H. W. Anderson, counsel for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad minority stockholders, who oppose the consolidation, continued crossexamination which went back to 1915 in its consideration of Van Sweringen's realty and suburban railroad interests at Cleveland.

Newton D. Baker, counsel for the Van Sweringen interests, had strenuously objected to the questioning of his clients as to the business projects in which they were engaged previous to their railroad connections, but he gave notice today that the objections had been withdrawn. Commissioner Meyer said at the same time that the Commission had overruled the objections.

Van Sweringen furnished a list of stockholders in the Terminals' Properties Corporation, which he said had been organized in 1915 with one-half of its ownership held by himself and brother. This corporation became possessed of real estate in Cleveland and of suburban railroad rights-of-way.

Later Van Sweringen borrowed, with the corporation's stock as collateral, large sums which helped him in acquiring control of the Nickel Plate Railroad.

LEMON JUICE BEST TO WHITEN SKIN

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you have a whole quarter-pint of the most wonderful skin whitener, softener and beautifier.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It cannot irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion; also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It cannot be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.

ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Substantial progress in development of anti-aircraft fire in "accuracy and volume" has been noted by Major-General John L. Hines, Chief of Staff, from advance reports of the first phases of the extensive program of summer test firing inaugurated by the War Department as a result of the controversy over aircraft matters before a congressional committee at the last session. The tests are being made by Fort Tilden, New York; Fort Barrancas, San Francisco, and in Hawaii.

A report to Acting Secretary Davis by Gen. Hines, made public last night, shows that results "gratifying to those responsible for the development of anti-aircraft artillery" had been obtained at Fort Tilden during the last week, with both three-inch guns and machine rifle fire against targets towed by airplanes. Units of the 62nd Coast Artillery manned the guns.

Target Elevated 6000 Feet.

The three-inch batteries fired 445 shots in eight minutes and 40 seconds at a target towed 70 miles an hour at an elevation of 6000 feet for a distance of about two and one-half miles.

"While one target was shot down and lost at sea," Hines said in summarizing the results, "seven holes were counted in the targets recovered. This means that each of the two batteries scored a hit three times a minute."

"The batteries fired at a rate slightly above 51 shots per battery per minute, which is more than 234 shots per gun per minute.

"The percentage of hits scored, 5.6, or one hit for each 10 shots fired, was about six times as many hits as have been claimed for the firing at the end of the war.

Close Watch on Shots.

"Major - General Summerall, commanding the Second Corps Area, and technical officers from Washington, observed the firing at targets which are cloth bags 19 feet long, five feet in diameter at one end by three and a half at the other and are towed at the end of a 2100-foot wire. The target is about one-fourth the size of a modern bombing plane, which would have a wing spread of 74 feet, 2 inches, a length of 24 feet, 7 inches and a height of 14 feet, 8 inches.

"To calculate other than those represented in actual holes in the target, an observer rode in the towing plane and another was stationed on the ground, the target being watched ahead by one and behind by the other.

"Bursts are considered hits, when they occur within 50 yards of the target as viewed from the gun and when within 36 yards short to 15 yards over as viewed from the plane," Hines explained.

"In view of the wide dispersion of high explosive shells, this is the area within which destructive effect might be expected."

U. S. FLEET NEARS AUSTRALIA

Part to Go to Melbourne, Part to Sydney.

By the Associated Press.

U. S. S. MISSISSIPPI, July 20.—The United States fleet, bound for Australia, was within 761 miles of its destination at 8 o'clock this morning.

The United States fleet, on its way from the maneuvers at Honolulu, will divide Wednesday morning off Cape Howe. One part will go to Melbourne and the other to Sydney.

By the Associated Press.

MELBOURNE, July 20.—Reception arrangements for the American fleet continue energetically. Already flags are flying gaily. A schools' holiday has been proclaimed for July 24, the date the fleet arrives. Ordinary traffic through Port Philip Heads will be suspended to insure the uninterrupted progress of the fleet and prevent accident. An aerial welcome is among the features planned.

GIRL SAVES MAN UNDER BULL

Cowgirl Bride Ropes Animal Trampling Rodeo Performer.

By the Associated Press.

PORTCHESTER, N. Y., July 20.—Having been rescued by a cowgirl bride's unerring lariat from a maddened bull, Sy Sage, Oklahoma rodeo performer, is in a hospital here today with a broken leg and bruises. Mrs. Richard Shelton, known as an expert broncho buster, was the rescuer.

Sage's act was to jump from his horse to the back of a bull and throw it. The bull flung Sage to the ground and started to trample him. Mrs. Shelton swung her lariat over the horns of the bull and pulled it from its victim. Mrs. Shelton, who was Miss Rene Halsey of Oklahoma, eloped a few days ago to wed Richard Shelton, also a performer.

400 Deaths by Auto in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 20.—The four hundredth death from automobile accidents in Chicago and vicinity has been recorded, an increase of 22 per cent over the first 200 days of last year. Children to the number of 121 are included in the 400 dead," said Coroner Wolf, "and more than two-thirds of the victims were pedestrians." Chicago's four hundredth death was one of nearly a score reported throughout the country over the week end, while a number of persons were drowned.

LOTT AND WRAY BROWN PROVED SURPRISES OF CLAY COURT TOURNEY

Chicagoan Forced Tilden To Limit In Final, While St. Louisan Upset 2 Stars

Wesbrook and Snodgrass Won Doubles Championship Defeating Tilden and Wiener in Straight Sets, With Loss of but Four Games.

By Arthur Schneff.

The fifteenth annual national clay court championship, which was completed yesterday on the Triple A Club courts, after an inauspicious start, finished as one of the most interesting and exciting tournaments in the history of the event.

Champion William Tilden of Philadelphia successfully defended his title and for the fifth time was crowned clay court champion, while Harvey Snodgrass and Walter Wesbrook of Los Angeles came through in the final round yesterday to replace the Kinsey brothers as doubles champions. However, the progress of both doubles and singles competition was marked by startling upsets.

Tilden's five-set mach in the final with young George Lott Jr. of Chicago will long be remembered as one of the most exciting ever seen on a local court. The 19-year-old lad was at one time within two points of taking Tilden's title away. Not only was the play furiously contested, but interest was added to the battle by the champion's "temperamental" outbursts. The Philadelphian bickered with his opponent, the linesmen and the spectators. So greatly did he antagonize the gallery that the umpire had to threaten to stop the match if the spectators would not stop hissing and applauding. To the manifest disappointment of the large gallery, Tilden finally defeated his young opponent, 3—6, 6—3, 2—6, 6—2, 8—6.

Two Upsets in Doubles.

The doubles provided two upsets. Tilden and "Sandy" Wiener reversed form by winning their semifinal match from the Kinsey brothers of San Francisco. The Kinseys had won two out of three sets before darkness interrupted play Saturday. The match was continued yesterday, and Tilden and his young partner surprised by taking two straight sets. It was the first time the Philadelphia pair had been able to accomplish that feat.

Tilden and Wiener played beautiful tennis to down the Kinseys, and were favored to win from Snodgrass and Wesbrook. However, the two sets against the Kinseys had exhausted Tilden and Wiener, and when the final started, 20 minutes later, the Eastern players were hardly able to move about the court. Tilden, for the first time in the tournament, was tired, and he frequently sat down to snatch a few seconds' rest between games. Wiener was in about the same predicament. The result was that the hard-hitting Californians, who were in their best form, met with no opposition at all. Tilden and Wiener were beaten, 6—1, 6—2, 6—1. The match was so one-sided that it was never interesting.

Brown Upsets "Dope."

The tournament provided an immense amount of satisfaction to St. Louis tennis fans, for two local players reached the semifinal round in singles and a local team reached the semifinal in doubles. Brian I. C. Norton played good tennis and in the semifinal match against George Lott played almost as well as Tilden. The match went to five sets before Norton was eliminated.

Wray Brown of St. Louis, provided the biggest upsets of the singles, the Tilden-Lott match excepted. Brown who was ranked No. 22 last year surprised by toppling Alfred Chapin Jr. in straight sets. Brown then came back next day to win a five-set match from Harvey Snodgrass who is ranked No. 6 nationally.

Brown and Norton reached the semifinal round in doubles while Brown yesterday won the special invitation singles. In the special matches, Brown first won from Wesbrook, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3, while Snodgrass and Brown then clashed to decide the winner. By agreement, only one set was played and Brown won, 9—7.

CLAY COURT SIDELIGHTS

Junior Boehmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus Boehmer of 4056 Lindell boulevard, accompanied Champion William Tilden to Chicago last night to take part in the Boys' Tournament of the Illinois State championship, which began at the Skokie Country Club today.

Tilden was first attracted by the intelligent, clean-cut appearance of the little fellow when he acted as ball boy during one of the champion's matches. They became fast friends and Tilden has had the youngster to dinner and a movie every night of the tournament. He has also been instructing him in tennis.

Tourney a Real Success.

C. Drummond Jones, chairman of the championship committee, in charge of the National Clay Court tennis tournament, said today that this year's event could be considered an entire success.

"The receipts were not quite up to last year's," he said, 'due to the fact that some of our best drawing cards arrived late.

"From a tennis standpoint, however, the tournament would be hard to excel. It furnished some of the best and most exciting play I have ever witnessed. I think that every day the spectators have been fully satisfied. The committee appreciates the large amount of co-operation it has received from many sources, and especially from the newspapers."

Neither "One-Eyed" Connolly nor any of his ilk came to the tournament. The nearest approach to a "gate crasher," according to Ticket Takers Rothweller and Gleason, was a young man who presented tickets a day old. It developed that he had the right tickets in another pocket and offered the wrong ones by mistake.

"Charlie" Nelson, guardian of the inner gate, who was overcome by heat and taken home Friday, was back on duty for the final day of the tournament.

Lott's Play in the Clay Court Championship Shows He Has Made Marked Progress, Tilden Writes

His Uphill Victory Over Norton and Fine Fight Against the Champion Himself Proves Chicago Youth Has Both Playing Ability and Match Temperament.

By William T. Tilden, II.

George Lott, of Chicago, National Junior champion, was the outstanding figure of the National Clay Court championship which ended yesterday on the courts of the Triple A. Following sensational victories on successive days over Howard O. Kinsey and B. I. Norton he carried me within two points of the match in one of the most bitterly contested final rounds I have played.

Tilden.

Lott was steadiness personified throughout the match. He used rare judgment in his advances to net while his defense was stonewall. I was erratic and uncertain throughout, as I was all week. I have seldom missed more consistently off the ground; but I think it was partly due to Lott's uncanny ability to keep the ball in play, which had me "pressing."

Lott's brilliant performances against Kinsey, Norton and myself give every indication that he has made marked progress this year and is marching on his way up the tennis ladder.

The most sensational feature of Lott's play was his sensational uphill fight against B. I. C. Norton, who ran away with the first two sets.

I have seldom seen finer baseline play than Norton showed against Lott in the first two sets. Everything he tried worked. He beat Lott cross court or down the line, fore or back hand whenever the junior champion attempted to come in. Lott was wild, uncertain and plainly worried. With the opening of the third set, Lott changed his style to steady, pat ball and was content to run Norton. The change worked well and gradually the ascendency shifted, with Lott gaining control of his game and Norton slowly becoming erratic.

Norton the Sounder Player.

The terrific running that Norton was forced to do had its effect and in the fifth set he fell a victim to leg cramps that materially slowed him up in court covering. Lott's victory was due to clever generalship, sound tactics plus a courageous match-temperament, although I consider that Norton is the sounder tennis player.

Wray Brown was steady, heady and courageous against me in the other bracket of the semifinal, but found me on a day when I was missing few and hitting hard. The score was 6—3, 7—5, 6—1, just about tells the story of the match, Brown reaching his peak in the second set but his defense weakening in the third. He played fine tennis at all times needing only a little more speed and a sounder backhand to be up with the top flight.

The early rounds, up to the semifinal produced interesting and in a few cases sensational tennis. Wray Brown started his remarkable play by a brilliant straight set victory over A. H. Chapin Jr., who was a victim of Brown's steadiness, his own lack of dirt court practice and the blazing St. Louis sun. Brown ran Chapin miles and by clever mixed shots had the Eastern star always on the defense. Seldom have I seen finer control than Brown displayed that day.

The high spot of the day for St. Louis came when Wray Brown, who had surprised by defeating Chapin, eliminated Harvey Snodgrass in five sets. Brown, starting not too well for the first three sets, one of which he won, grew steadily better as the match went on while Snodgrass, never at his best, collapsed utterly in his net attack, in the last two sets, and a bitter battle ended almost in a rout.

Snodgrass Weakened.

Snodgrass went in for the rest, leading two sets to one, but following the intermission could win but two games in two sets. It was a remarkable reversal of form, due more to Snodgrass' failures than to Brown's improvement.

The doubles event produced but one upset for a "seeded" team, up to the semifinals. White and Thalheimer of Texas, fell before Brown and Norton of St. Louis in five sets owing to the victors' steady play and Thalheimer's weakening, due to a severe attack of ptomaine poisoning the previous night and day. Snodgrass and Wesbrook entered the final round by a clear-cut straight victory over Norton and Brown, featured by Snodgrass' sensational volleying and smashing.

Tilden Praises Weiner.

The sensational upset of the national champions Howard and Robert Kinsey by Sandy Weiner and myself, in a match started one day and held over with the Kinseys leading two sets to one only, to have us take the next two sets, the next day, was due largely to the splendid tennis by Wiener.

We went on into the final against Snodgrass and Wesbrook but could make no headway and lost decisively. Wiener continued his good tennis but I was far below form and gave him no support.

The tournament was a great success both financially—due to large galleries during the closing days of play—and from the tennis standpoint, owing to the efficient management and splendid courts. The committee, particularly C. Drummond Jones, Dan Jones, Roland Hoerr and J. B. Adoue, the official referee, ran the tournament with an eye always to the players' comfort and entertainment. One can safely say the national clay court championship of 1925 was an outstanding success.

Collinsville Muny.

Sir Peter Shows He's Real Rival Of American Flag

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, O., July 20.—They are marking time until it is definitely decided whether American Flag will run in Saturday's $25,000 added Cincinnati Derby. If Sam Riddle finds it possible to keep his promise and send the East's champion 3-year-old, this derby is going to be one great and decisive race. If he does not, the Cincinnati Derby will be narrowed down to an event of sectional interest.

Of course, there is a lot of class to the entries, even if American Flag should not be among them. The list is sure to include Sir Peter, King Nadi, Caractus, Dangerous, Kentucky Cardinal, Progress and probably Silver Fox. But it will take American Flag to give this race the touch of authority to make it an affair of national importance.

Judging from all indications, if American Flag does not come, Sir Peter will rule favorite over King Nadi, Caractus, Silver Fox and the others. On last Saturday even in defeat he performed creditably against the good 4-year-old Princess Doreen, which beat him a half length in a mile and an eighth race. With weight for age the mare had all the better of it, carrying 122 as a 4-year-old against 117 for a 3-year-old.

Close to Chilhowee's Mark.

An analysis of the event will show something more than ordinary. The mile and an eighth was run in 1:45 1-5, a new track record. Few realize that this is just two-fifths of a second slower than the American record, held by Chilhowee, made at Latonia last fall. When the two horses mentioned reached the mile the Princess was just three-quarters of a length in front and the time was recorded at 1:35 4-5. This mark is just one-fifth of a second slower than the American record made by Cherry Pie at Belmont Park in 1923 and three-fifths of a second faster than Zev ran the mile at Latonia for a track record in the fall of last year. This was just a preliminary trial for the son of Paicines but he proved himself more than a sprinter and appeared to like the route. He will carry his weight well over the Derby distance.

Silver Fox, the Rancocas stable's crack 3-year-old, qualified for the Cincinnati Derby when he won the Empire City Derby without much trouble last Saturday. He was sent to the front immediately after the barrier was released and did not have to show anything exceptionally to defeat Danby, Marconi and three others, including By Hisself, son of Man o' War. The mile and a quarter was run in 2:05 4-5, but the winner could have gone much faster had he been pushed.

VOSHELL WINS, GOES INTO FOURTH ROUND

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 20.—S. Howard Voshell, former title holder, was the first to reach the fourth round of the Metropolitan turf championship on the courts of the Crescent Athletic Club yesterday. He was never extended to defeat Fred Dambreau and Fred D. Powers in advancing, dropping only four games in four sets.

The only other entrant to reach the fourth round was the veteran Frederick C. Baggs, who scored almost as decisively over L. K. Franklin and Seldon G. Noyes.

The second day of the tournament found most of the seeded stars still absent as the result of tennis engagements elsewhere.

Lincoln Park Crews Dominate Regatta at Creve Coeur Lake

Quincy's Four-Oared Crew Wins Right to Represent Association at National Meet Next Month — Century Club Third in Point Score.

Lincoln Park (Chicago) oarsmen established complete supremacy over all rivals in the middle Western district when they won the Southwestern Amateur Rowing Association regatta at Creve Coeur Lake Saturday and yesterday. They piled up a total of 135 points, outstripping the nearest competitor by 37 points.

Before a gathering of approximately 10,000 persons, the Chicagoans carried away highest honors in the senior races yesterday after they had dominated the junior field on Saturday. In spite of the prevalence of a steady breeze which resulted in choppy water, good time was made in almost all events.

Lincoln Wins Four Events.

In the singles, doubles, quarter-mile dash for fours and the eight-oared shell events, Lincoln Park oarsmen were first across the finish line.

A new record for the meet was registered by Charles Miner of the Lincoln Park organization when he nosed out his teammate, Kenneth Thomson, in the quarter-mile singles event.

South Side Boat Club of Quincy, which finished second to Lincoln Park in the competition for the point trophy, was prominent in the four-oared events on both days. The senior crew, composed of G. Hussong, W. E. Arp, W. P. Arp and R. Bennett, will represent the Southwestern Association in the national championship regatta at Philadelphia next month.

The Century Boat Club made the best showing of the five St. Louis clubs engaged in the regatta. Century finished third in the point table with Western and St. Louis next in order.

Paddock's Expenses Not Excessive, Say Stockholm Promotors

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, July 20.—SWEDISH sports promoters responsible for the recent visit of Charles Paddock, the American runner, are disinclined to accept the charges in Berlin newspapers that he and Loren Murchison, his companion American sprinter, have made excessive demands for expense payments during their European tour.

"Paddock's demands for expenses in Stockholm," one of the local promoters said, "were certainly not low, as such items go, but they were not excessive. When the Stockholm athletic meeting proved an economic failure, the American voluntarily offered to reduce his expense account."

Paddock is now in Finland, but is expected to return to Sweden next week.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 20.—Loren Murchison of the New York A. C. and Charles Paddock of California, both famous American runners, are charged by the Neue Berliner Zwoelfuhr Zeitung with having exacted "fees" ranging from 1500 to 2000 marks before starting in the recent German sprinting races.

In each case, says the newspaper, the German promoter of the athletic games paid the money, as it was feared the games would suffer through loss in the sale of tickets if the Americans failed to participate. It also asserts that in the exhibitions in Berlin and Hamburg a short while ago, the American runners each received a total of 3000 marks which it alleges they demanded of the local promoter before appearing at the starting point for the races.

"When Paddock and Murchison first appeared in Germany last year," the newspaper asserts, "they still were members of the American Olympic team and as such were compelled to uphold the principles of amateur athletics. As keen Americans, however, they promptly scented the financial opportunities held out by sport, and therefore this year decided to organize an expedition of their own. It is plain that they found Germany their most remunerative field."

Made Poor Showing.

The paper expresses the belief that the Americans also accepted starting fees at Crefeld, Bochum and Breslau, where they entered the local contests. German sporting ire was especially warm because the Americans failed to make "any kind of a showing" in competition against German sprinters.

"It would seem," adds the newspaper, 'that the American entrants were less concerned about enhancing their own or their country's reputation in the sporting line than they were about doing a lucrative business."

A demand is made by the paper that the German athletic authorities permanently disbar the two American sprinters from further contests in Germany. It asserts that the promoters of the Stockholm contests flatly refused to meet the demands of Paddock and Murchison and compelled the Americans to run under the conditions imposed by those contests.

LONDON, July 20.—The decision of the authorities of the Amateur Athletic Associaton to withhold the trophies won by Loren Murchison in the 100 and 220 yard dashes at Stamford Bridge, Saturday afternoon, is attracting much attention in athletic circles. Murchison himself declines to talk on the subject, but he has stated emphatically that he has not infringed his amateur status and that he would not have competed in the Stamford Bridge games under any circumstances if he had done so.

The Browns may not win the 1925 pennant i… League, but every club that faces George Sisler an… know it has been in a fight. Those Brownies refuse … battle until the last man is out.

It was that way in the second game of the series with the league-leading Athletics. Although the Browns lost, 12 to 8, in 15 innings, a defeat which broke a winning streak of six in a row, Mack's men had no easy time of it. It was ding-dong from the start, and neck and neck near the finish.

Four times the men of Sisler faced Eddie Rommel, Connie Mack's star knuckle-ball pitcher, when they were behind. And four times they knotted the score. Once they went ahead. But the Mackmen came back to tie the count on Simmons' homer in the ninth, sending the battle into extra innings.

There were 23,500 persons present, the largest crowd of the season. They were treated to one of the gamest exhibitions ever given by a St. Louis team. Those Brownies were fighting to keep that winning streak intact. Also they were battling to hold third place. They failed, but it was a brave fight.

Lamotte Atones for Costly Error.

There was no particular star. All had a hand in it. For instance there was Dave Danforth, the left-hander, who was a one-hit pitcher for five innings. Dave had tough luck in that an error by Lamotte gave the enemy two runs in the third. But Lamotte atoned later by his hitting and by fielding which at times bordered on the sensational.

There was Manager Sisler. One run behind in the seventh with Lamotte on first, Sisler pounded one of Rommel's offerings into the right field sun seats. That put the Browns ahead for the only time during the contest. On all other occasions they were battling with their backs to the wall.

Kenny Williams also came in for his share of the honor. Williams was on second base, with the tying run in the tenth, following his safety and an infield out. Jacobson then sent a little tap towards third. Rommel went over and made the play at first. It was a fine play, and Rommel and Miller were congratulating each other. Catcher Berry joined in. That left the plate uncovered. Ken Williams, with that tying run, did not hesitate at third. He kept right on coming and he slid across the plate, just as the Mackmen were waking up to the fact that a runner had been on the sacks. It was a daring bit of work and Williams received his full share of applause.

Baby Doll Brings Home Two.

Then there was the twelfth inning. In the first portion, the Brownie defense had cracked behind Elam Vangilder, who had replaced Danforth, and the enemy counted three times. Did the Browns quit? Decidedly not. They came back, and before you could turn around there were three Browns on the sacks. McManus struck out, but Jacobson's single sent in two. Hargrave sent a long fly and once more the Browns had matched the enemy's total.

The play at the plate, again on Kenny Williams, was close. Cy Perkins growled at Umpire McGowan. So did Rommel. Even Welch, who had made the throw from right field, came in to complain. He complained so loud that he was ejected from the game.

But there is an end to everything. And so it was with the Browns. After Philadelphia had counted four times in the fifteenth, when Ernie Wingard faltered, the Browns could not come back. They were retired in order by Rommel, who went the full distance, and the winning streak was no more, and the men of Sisler were again in fourth position, one point behind the White Sox, who advanced, although idle.

Rommel Hurls 15 Innings.

The Athletics were not without honors. There was Rommel, the knuckle ball expert, who went the full distance. After the Browns had tied the score in the twelfth, Rommel settled down to his task and retired the next nine men to face him. Four of the nine were cut down on strikes. There was Chick Galloway, who had a homer, and Al Simmons, whose drive over the left field fence sent the clash into extra rounds.

Pneumonia Fatal To Pepper Martin

Junior Lightweight Dies After Illness of Only a Few Days.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 20.—Vincent "Pepper" Martin, one of the most colorful boxers of the last few years, died yesterday afternoon of pneumonia in St. John's Hospital, Long Island City. He had been ill only a few days and was confined to the hospital since Thursday. His condition, at the time, was not considered very serious. Yesterday afternoon he suddenly took a turn for the worse and died shortly thereafter.

Martin was married and had one child. His last ring battle was with Mike Ballerino for the junior lightweight championship, and was held in the Queensboro stadium, Long Island City. Martin lost the decision in this battle, but as always was the case with him, he put up a thrilling battle. That was on July 6.

Martin was born Nov. 1, 1888, of Irish-American parents, in New York. He began boxing professionally in 1917, and in the eight years that he graced the ring he had many desperate engagements.

Y. M. H. A. TEAM LOSES SECOND CONTEST IN EMPIRE LEAGUE RACE

Wiles-Chipmans Defeat Leaders In Feature Tilt

KUHS RETAIN LEAD

The race in the Independent League continues to be the closest and most exciting for the pennant in the groups playing in the Municipal Baseball Association. Yesterday's games were expected to put the Kuhs into a comfortable lead, but the Polish Falcons downed the strong Meletios and stayed half a game out of first place.

Of the six teams making up the circuit, four have enjoyed temporary leadership since the start of the season and the team on the top rung is never more than a game or two out of danger. The victory by the Falcons was part of a determined spurt that started five weeks ago. The Kuhs had an easy time downing the Polish Cadets, 19 to 3.

Another persistent candidate for first place, the St. Casimirs in the City League, received a setback, losing to the Sennett A. C., 5 to 4, in 10 innings. The game was one of the best of the day and puts the Saints two full games behind the Lischke Indians, who took their thirteenth straight, shutting out the Lamperts, 8—0.

Y. M. H. A. Defeated.

The Empire League provided an upset in the victory of the Wiles-Chipman nine over the Y. M. H. A., league leaders. The Y. M. H. A. had lost but one game and Wiles-Chipman had won only three. Buecher hurling for the winners, held the "Y" batters to one run up to the ninth. Nerviana, Y. M. H. A. ace, was hit freely, Crocker knocking two homers. The Typos, closest rivals to the Y. M. H. A., lost a chance to gain ground by splitting a double bill with the La Salle A. C. so that the "Y" still has a big lead.

The Web Pressmen won their twelfth victory in the South Side League by beating the Mailers' Union, 8 to 3.

St. Louis Chapter forged into the lead in the De Molay League by tying and winning in a double-header with Sentinel while the other nines were idle.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Sportsmanship.

TENNIS is supposed to breed the finest type of sportsmen and we assume that it does. And yet there are certain aspects to the court manners of some of the country's foremost players that may not stand the acid test.

Even that remarkable player, William T. Tilden, is no exception in practices that, to many of us, seem just a gesture at best and to others a positive breach of good taste.

One of the practices almost nationally followed is that of compensating for what seemed a mistake by a linesman, or other official calling a play, by deliberately outing or netting.

Another, and still less defensible, procedure is that of indulging an opponent by obviously throwing off strokes and then putting on full pressure to show him up, whenever it becomes necessary.

* * *

Et Tu, Big Billy.

AS head of this most sportsmanlike pastime we have Big Bill Tilden and it pains and grieves one to think that Large William suffers from the frailties of commoner men.

The writer was present at one Davis Cup final in which Tilden opposed Anderson of Australia. A linesman called a set point in favor of Tilden, which was not to the liking of the 20,000 bleacherites at Forest Hills. They booed the linesman. Poor sportsmanship is right.

* * *

The first four serves by Anderson he deliberately outed. Then he proceeded to toss off the entire set. The gesture said plainly: "See, I am throwing away this entire set to make up for the one point you spectators think the linesman gave me."

Having accomplished the tossing of the set, Tilden turned like a wolf on the embarrassed and humiliated Australian and literally shredded him. He aced him with his cannonball service, he passed him going the wrong way at the net, he tore the racket from Anderson's backhand with his screeching returns. In short, he was telling the crowd: "See what a poor boob of a player this lad is when I want to play my best."

That, too, may be sportsmanship, but—

* * *

Bill Has His Side.

TILDEN has his side. It really is unfair of spectators to behave like baseball bleacherites at a tennis match. The crowd is on top of the players and applause for one player, while the point is being decided, and continued applause all one-sided, are thoughtless indeed on the part of a tennis gallery.

Tilden's temperament wavered during the clay court event on several occasions, but we can find it in our hearts to excuse him for some of his manifest irritation which was provoked by the vocal support of the opposing players in almost every match Tilden contested.

Tilden is entitled to the fullest recognition, for beyond all cavil there is no player like him and probably there never was his equal in tennis history.

Rosenberg Meets Shea in Title Go

Proceeds of Bout Wednesday Will Be Turned Over to Charity.

By Fair Play.
(Copyright, 1925.)

NEW YORK, July 20.—Sweet charity is due for another sock in the eye when Charley Rosenberg defends his bantamweight title against the Chicago Italian with the Irish monicker, Eddie Shea, Wednesday, at the Velodrome in New York City.

Just how much Rosenberg will receive for his services in behalf of the Hunt's Point Jewish Center, for which the show is being held, has not been stated, but Harry Siegel, the champion's manager, made no bones at all about asking $25,000 for his end of a bout to a decision against Frankie Genaro. So the chances are Rosey will receive no piker sum.

The card backing up the star event is one worthy of drawing the customers in goodly numbers. In fact it rates next to the Italian hospital fund card in this respect.

Rosenberg, who will defend his title, is by no means a great champion. That appellation in the bantam division has been somewhat passe since the days of Kid Williams, the little Baltimore terror.

Rosenberg's manager has been wary and has picked out a number of no-decision matches for his charge at catch weights. Charley, in fact, has made the bantam limit but once in the past two years and it is a question if he can be as strong as he would like to at the weight.

If Rosenberg fights his usual style and meets the challenger at his own game of slam bang either is liable to drop, as both are short on science and open for a decisive wallop.

Louis Firpo Says He Wants Another Bout With Heavy Champion

By the Associated Press.
BUENOS AIRES, July 20.—Luis Firpo, the Argentine heavyweight, says that he is anxious for another fight with Jack Dempsey and that the proposed match between Dempsey and Harry Wills displeases him.

Luis has sent the following cablegram to Jack:

"For the sake of the game it would please me to hear that your bout with Wills is not coming off, because I sincerely believe the Black Panther is more of a wrestler than a boxer.

"I am going into training very soon and intend to abandon all other business in order to improve my present physical condition with a view to meeting you again in the ring in 1926."

CLEVELAND'S NEWEST RACE TRACK OPENS

By the Associated Press.
CLEVELAND, O., July 20.—Thistledown Park, Cleveland's newest racing plant for running horses, constructed at a cost of approximately $700,000, was formally opened today for a three weeks' meeting. Patterned after Havre de Grace, Belmont Park and other tracks, it is one of the most modern in the country.

Stock's Playing One of Features Of Robins' Work

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1925.)

NEW YORK, July 20.—If the Brooklyn Nationals were figuring more prominently in the league race, there would be more bass drums, cymbals and trombones for Milton Stock and his second basing for the Robins. Stock is stirring up quite a little sensation in the city across the river.

"Uncle Robby" Robinson didn't know just what to do with Stock last spring down in Florida. Stock had played third base for 142 games in 1924, but he wasn't so much of a third baseman and his batting was nothing to brag about—only .242.

Uncle Robby was quite certain he didn't want to start Stock again at third. Necessity forced him to work Stock at third for a time during training, but finally he hit upon the expedient of putting Stock on second.

Players Surprised.

"What do you think of that?" exclaimed the other players. "Stock can't play second. He never played it in his life." It looked as if the players were right and by the time the season started Stock had been put back on third and High on second.

Much chalk has been spilled on the baselines since then, and in the meanwhile, finding his second base problem too much for him, Uncle Robby put Stock back there again. Since then Stock has been burning them up at second.

Four times he has accepted his little eight chances in a nine-inning game, seven times he has accepted nine, once 10 and three times 11. And mind you, all this after joining the Giants away back in 1912 when he was picked up on the western prairies by Dick Kinsella, then scouting for the Giants.

Batting With Leaders.

McGraw kept him through 1914, farmed out now and then, and sent him to Philadelphia just in time to see the Phillies beat him out of the pennant, with Pat Moran bossing them. Stock was with the Phillies through 1918 and then went to St. Louis for five years. He joined the Brooklyns in 1924, narrowly missed being with a championship team despite his own mediocre work, and now is playing a championship brand of second base for a club that doesn't look as if it had any chance to win a championship.

Good as his play in the field is, however, improvement is not as marked there as in his bat. He is up with the top notchers and has even been above Hornsby at times. He's fifth in his league, now, with a standing of .375.

"I found that fountain of youth down in Florida that the other guy missed," Stock explains with a grin when anybody asks him "how come" the big change.

ST. LOUIS STARS WIN OVER CUBAN TEAM, 10-5

The Cuban Stars in the Negro National League dropped the second game of the series to the St. Louis Stars yesterday at the Stars' park, 10 to 5. The Cubans were held scoreless by Hensley until the seventh inning, when they collected four hits to score two runs.

Montalvo was hit hard by the locals, who scored in every inning but the first and third. Russell's running catch in right field was the feature play of the game. Redues, Wells and Wilson each hit a home run. Abreu hit a home run for the visitors.

The third game of the series will be played this afternoon.

Wakonda Club Wins.

ANSWERS TO QUE

BEGINNER.—To remove mildew stains from white material try soaking the goods in sour milk, then place in the sun to dry.

B. S. — Your wedding apparel depends entirely on the circumstances and you are the best judge of those. Read the fashion magazines for pointers on dress.

ANXIOUS.—Wet the sponge in alcohol and lay upon the spot, covered with newspaper, to prevent evaporation, and leave for half an hour. Then sponge the softened glue with some more alcohol.

F. W. R.—If you will consult books on etiquette at the Public Library, you can obtain full information on the proper way to conduct a wedding, what clothes to wear, and what is to be paid for by the bride and groom.

JEAN.—The Chinaman's queue was the symbol of their loyalty to the Chinese Empire. When the Empire became a Republic this custom ceased. The short hair now is the sign of their emancipation.

S. S.—Shaw's Garden has been open to the public since 1889. At that time it was only open on week days, closed Sundays except two Sundays out of the year. The garden site is the gift of Henry Shaw, who died in 1889. His fortune of more than $1,000,000 went to endow it, and the income supports it.

OUTDOORS.—The following is a formula for water-proofing canvas: . Gelatin, 50 parts, by weight, boiled in 3000 parts of water free from lime. 2. Alum, 100 parts, dissolved in 3000 parts of water. 3. Soda soap dissolved in 2000 parts of water. Mix the three solutions.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

BEGINNER.—To remove mildew stains from white material try soaking the goods in sour milk, then place in the sun to dry.

B. S.—Your wedding apparel depends entirely on the circumstances and you are the best judge of those. Read the fashion magazines for pointers on dress.

ANXIOUS.—Wet the sponge in alcohol and lay upon the spot, covered with newspaper, to prevent evaporation, and leave for half an hour. Then sponge the softened place with some more alcohol.

F. W. R.—If you will consult books on etiquette at the Public Library, you can obtain full information on the proper way to conduct a wedding, what clothes to wear, and what is to be paid for by the bride and groom.

JEAN.—The Chinaman's queue was the symbol of their loyalty to the Chinese Empire. When the Empire became a Republic this custom ceased. The short hair now is the sign of their emancipation.

B. S.—Shaw's Garden has been open to the public since 1889. At that time it was only open on week days, closed Sundays except two Sundays out of the year. The garden site is the gift of Henry Shaw, who died in 1889. His fortune of more than $1,000,000 went to endow it, and the income supports it.

J. A. D.—If plants are infested with insects, cut a potato in half, scoop out the inside, and place it on the soil under the plants. The insects will gradually assemble in it. Preventive measures are worth far more than experiments upon the full-grown insect. Lime water destroys the spring aphid.

READED.—To clean marble slabs, mix two parts of common soda, one part of pumice stone and one part of finely powdered salt. Sift the mixture through a fine sieve and mix it with water, then rub it well over the marble and the stains will be removed. Rub the marble with salt and water, then wash off and wipe dry.

MRS. W.—Cleanliness and getting rid of all foodstuffs left about the kitchen and sink will help you to clear it of roaches. Sprinkle borax in the crevices around the sink and pantry. Borax, starch and cocoa are said to be the principal ingredients of some of the roach foods on the market. A formula is as follows: Borax, 37 ounces; starch, 9 ounces, cocoa, 4 ounces.

CURIOUS.—The first steam carriage from which grew the present automobile was proposed by Sir Isaac Newton in 1680. In 1790 Nathan Read patented and constructed a model, but it was not until 1796 that Nichola Joseph Cougnot built the first one which would really go. A museum in Paris still has the original model on exhibition.

RED HEAD.—Anyone desiring to become a designer or commercial artist should attend some good art school. Washington University School of Fine Arts would be suitable if you live in St. Louis. Watch the advertisements or advertise for positions where your talent for sketching and designing can be put to practical use while you are attending either day or night school.

N. A. A.—Any responsible person may be a chaperon, older sister, aunt, uncle, cousin, family friend, either man or woman. Chaperons for young people do not necessarily have to be a married couple. Any person who is approved by your family as being of good character and capable of watching the welfare of the boys and girls entrusted to his or her care would make a satisfactory chaperon.

MRS. E. F. G.—We suggest the following for the children's luncheon: Fruit cocktail, creamed chicken patties, rolls or tea biscuit, milk, hot chocolate, ice cream and fancy cakes. Do not forget the birthday cake with little pink candles the number of the age of the child and one to grow on. For favors go to the department stores; there are many and novel ones to choose from. It is rather difficult to choose games for children between the ages of 3 and 6; probably the best course would be to see what games the children know.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

H. H. S.—To answer your question would be to describe every form of physical exercise and every appliance used in exercise.

MRS.-IN-DOUBT.—We do not offer advice in such a case as yours. We suggest your consulting a reputable physician.

X. Y. Z.—Do not rely on local applications to reduce, but exercise. There is no lazy way to keep in physical trim. See answer to "H. R."

H. R.—Exercise will reduce. Walk, play tennis, basket ball, or any other active exercise. Standing and squatting are good exercises, also lying on the back and elevating first one leg and then the other.

FLORENCE.—Vinegar as a rinse for the hair, if used continually, would probably be injurious. We do not know of any astringent lotion which would benefit enlarged pores. The best remedy is time. Let them alone.

A. J. J.—Any person should know if a food is or is not fatty. We could not undertake to list all non-fatty and fatty foods. For pimples dab on, and let dry, one part Vlemnicx's solution, four parts of water. Gradually reduce the water.

WM. H.—Eczema has many causes, local and systemic. As a routine Lassar's paste at night and zinc oxide, calamine lotion during the day often is of help. Try the following for the falling hair: Castor oil, ½ dram; resorcin, 6 scruples; cologne, 1½ ounces; alcohol, 4½ ounces.

Competition and Service

"If you look at the oil industry without bias," says W. C. Platt in the National Petroleum News of April 29, 1925, "I believe you will find that it has been a typical American industry, with much competition and great freedom of competition in the last twelve or fifteen years."

Mr. Platt cites the case of Ohio—which is very similar to that of several Middle West states served by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

In 1912, Ohio had 63,000 automobiles. In 1924, it had 1,244,000 automobiles—or about 1900% increase.

To serve this vastly increased business has been a task of such herculean proportions that the oil companies then in business could not increase their facilities fast enough to keep up with the demand.

As the need of petroleum products increased, competition increased—not only to provide the additional service required but in order that society might function efficiently and smoothly.

An industry grows in response to the demand of consumers for more products and more efficient service.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has grown in response to the demands of the public. It has grown in the face of keen, persistent, aggressive competition and holds its leadership solely through rendering a consistently superior service.

In ten Middle Western states in which the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) operates, there are some 3489 competitive oil companies.

In all of its dealings with competitors, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) employs the same principles—fairness and justice which it insists are the rights of its employes and stockholders. To its customers it gives thoughtful service, superior products and the utmost of value for the money they spend.

It is by following these sound practices that the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has grown from an organization of moderate proportions to be one of America's foremost institutions—in size, scope and service.

MOVEMENT OF WINTER WHEAT LOWERS PRICES

CHICAGO, July 20.—The movement of the winter wheat crop from farms to terminals is at last under way in earnest and to this can be attributed the further decline of prices in the wheat market today. The Southwest advised that farmers seem satisfied with present values are disposing of their wheat direct from the threshing machines. As a result traders changed their sentiment regarding present values and a small decline occurred.

St. Louis today received 399 cars of wheat, Kansas City 366; Omaha, 236, and Chicago, 427, a total of 1698 cars in the four principal winter wheat markets, or over 2,000,000 bushels.

Chicago arrivals of wheat were mostly from Illinois points and much of the wheat was applied on previous contracts made to arrive with the result that the weight of the supplies was not felt on the future market. However, the trade feels that this is only the forerunner of a liberal movement and that hedging sale will be a pronounced factor before the week is over.

Another bearish feature was improvement in weather. Experts traveling in the Northwest again were optimistic in their reports. Showers over Canada and South Dakota helped. Rumania removed her export duty on wheat, indicating that she is back in the exporting class.

Foreigners are still indifferent to our offers. Liverpool, which had a sharp advance in early trade, closed 2⅜c to 2⅝c lower because of weakness in American markets.

Corn worked lower because of the better weather. A drop of 1¼ to 1½ degrees over the Southwest, accompanied by general rains, has improved the outlook here. This caused selling of new crop months, but Eastern houses bought December and May on the break. July longs seem to have given up hope, and liquidation in this month caused a sharp break, which depressed September. There seems an urgent demand for yellow corn premiums, which advanced ¼ cent today.

Visible Grain Changes.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes, in bushels: Wheat decreased 648,000. Corn decreased 1,964,000. Oats decreased 1,560,000. Rye decreased 381,000. Barley decreased 502,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, July 20.—Grain futures closed lower on the market today. The movement of winter wheat was an influence.

In the local cash grain market soft wheat was 2c to 3c lower in line with futures. Receipts were big, but there was a broad mill demand and clearance was good. Hard was 2c to 3c lower. Demand was good. Corn was 1½c to 2c lower. Demand was fair. Oats were 1c to 2c lower. Demand was fair.

Covering by shorts caused a little recovery in wheat prices late in the day. At the close, however, losses of 1 to 2 cents were registered. Corn closed ½c to 1c lower. Oats were ½c to ¾c lower. Lard closed 10c lower, ribs 15c to 17½c lower. Local cash sales were 500 bushels wheat, 74,000 corn, 38,000 oats. The seaboard reported 250,000 bushels wheat taken for export.

Favorable weather conditions in Northwest, with rain reported in Canada, sent wheat prices lower early today. Cutting was reported in South Dakota. It was reported cool in growing belt. The breaking up of heat wave in Northwest helped lower corn.

The three Northwestern markets combined had 436 cars of wheat, compared with 292 a week ago and 436 last year. Minneapolis receiving 225 cars, Duluth 46 and Winnipeg 165.

Local wheat receipts, which were 518,700 bushels, compared with 263,900 a week ago and 235,300 last year, included 356 cars local and 43 through. Corn receipts, which were 30,800 bushels, compared with 56,000 a week ago and 376,600 last year, included 14 cars local and 8 through. HOG RECEIPTS LIGHT BUT PRICES LOWER

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., July 20.—Receipts today, estimated: Cattle and calves, 12,500; hogs, 9000; sheep, 3500; horses and mules, 200.

HOGS—Hog prices continued lower in spite of light receipts, arrivals today estimated at 9000 head. With 1000 through hogs included in this number, the salable supply was reduced to approximately 8000. Receipts around the 11-market circuit showed a decrease from last Monday, total around 14,000 lighter. Quality locally was medium to good. Trading opened slow, with prices ranging from 10c to 25c lower, generally, light and shipping weights carrying 15c to 25c of the loss. Top for a few odd bunches of light lights reached $14, with the bulk of hogs 160 to 200 lbs. average selling at $13.85 to $13.95, the latter figure representing the practical market top. Medium and heavy butchers at 10c to 15c lower prices brought $13.75 to $13.90 to packers, this spread catching weights from 210 lbs. and up. Plain and bacon hogs brought $13.75 to $13.80 largely.

Pigs suffered a cut of 25c to 50c from last week's closing prices, strong weight kinds carrying the big end of the loss. Offerings from 130 to 150 lbs. average sold to $13.75 largely; medium weight kinds from 110 to 130 lbs. at $13.00 to $13.50, and lighter kinds downward to $12.50, according to weight and quality. Packer sows were 15c to 25c lower, sales at $12.25 to $12.35 mainly. Stags quotable at $10.50 to $11, some light kinds occasionally bringing higher figures.

CATTLE—Monday's trade averaged about steady except in native beef steers, some of which declined 25c in a slow market. Receipts were of good volume and included approximately 100 cars of Kansas and Oklahoma steers, sales of which were firm at $5.25 to $8.90 per cwt. Two cars of native yearling steers topped the trade at $12.85 per cwt. This was followed by a car of weighty beeves at $11.50. Fat light yearling steers and heifers scored upward to $11. Plain native beef steers graduated down to $7. Beef cows were most numerous at $4 to $5.50, followed by cutters at $3 to $3.75 and canners at $2.25 to $3. Bologna bulls passed the scales at $4 to $4.75, while light weight bulls of plain quality ranged down to $3. Veal calves averaged 50c lower, most of the best bringing $10 to $10.25.

Quotations—Beef steers, range, $5.00 to $14.00; light steers and heifers, range, $3.00 to $13.00; beef cows, range, $3.75 to $7.50; cutter cows, range, $3.00 to $3.75; canner cows, range, $2.25 to $3.00; bologna bulls, range, $4.00 to $5.00.

GENERALLY FIRM TONE ON NEW YORK CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 20.—Many [illegible] demonstrations took place in the [illegible] stocks on the curb market today, but as usual, the outside participation on the buying side was more than balanced by profit-taking sales. This selling naturally caused recessions, which were in most cases moderate, but demand was made on the reaction and the market in nearly all issues showed a firm tone.

Public utilities moved within an unusually narrow range on dealings that reached large volumes in many issues. Power Corporation of New York, ex-rights, [illegible] 85⅛, a net loss of about a point, and [illegible] was in good demand. National Power advanced 4 points, but later lost this gain. St. Regis Paper was weak, yielding about 3 points.

Electric Bond and Share showed strength at the start, but lost this gain within a short time. General Gas and Electric [illegible] Delaware "A," when issued, moved in the same way, a gain of a point at the opening being subsequently turned into a loss. There was initial trading in Norwalk Tire and Rubber, which ranged from 15 to 14½. Franklin Motor yielded a point under large sales, and Chapin [illegible] has been one of the strong features, also yielded a point. Continental Baking, after a fractional gain, reacted with other issues. There was a small amount of business in Glen Alden Coal, without much change in its position. Electric refrigerating stocks were slightly lower.

Engineers' gold was the only active feature in the mining group.

[A]DVANCE IN STOCK LIST CONTINUES

NEW YORK, July 20.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial review today says:

"Although interrupted by periodical waves of profit-taking, the upward movement on the Stock Exchange continued to hold sway during today's trading session. Some measure of reaction was experienced in practically all groups from the early high levels around midday, but these moderate set-backs merely served to attract fresh buying, under which prices quickly recovered to the best levels of the day. Mack Trucks and Havana Electric were probably the most spectacular feature of the day, both advancing sharply under the impetus of heavy demand. New high levels were reached in many groups with U. S. Steel common touching the best prices since early spring. [Fi]re stocks responded to the increases announced in price schedules of those companies and record earnings of the tobacco companies served to lift shares in that group to new tops for the year. The mail order stocks, especially Sears-Roebuck, attracted considerable attention and there was a greater degree of interest in the sugars. Oils displayed strength for a time but quickly simmered down. Many specialties again were bid up to new high prices for the year.

Rails Also Well Bought.

"Rails were by no means neglected, although the scope of price movements in the carrier division was narrow by comparison with fluctuations in the industrial groups. Buying of the transportation shares was probably done with a view to the approach of the heavy freight moving season. Among the standard dividend payers Atchison, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio and Southern Railway, the latter crossing its previous record price, all appeared to be in the course of accumulation by strong interests. Lake Erie & Western featured the low priced group, advancing almost 3 points in response to revival of talk of merger possibilities.

Money Market Continues Easy.

"Those who had been inclined to worry over the money situation recently undoubtedly were relieved by the manner in which the market acted in face of the heavy financing which was done during the day. Despite the offering of almost $100,000,000 in new securities for public subscription, the credit situation was unchanged, with money for market purposes available in plentiful volume throughout the day at the renewal rate of 3¾ per cent. Time money was in good supply.

"The Saturday Clearing House statement showed surplus reserve of member banks up more than $1,000,000 from that of the week before, indicating that local institutions are under no strain to meet demands at present.

Wheat Distinctly Reactionary.

"July wheat lost almost 2 cents a bushel in the course of the day and prices for future deliveries declined from a fraction to over 1 cent a bushel on reports that threshing of wheat had begun in North Dakota and that weather conditions in the belt were more favorable. Offerings were rather free as traders sought to reduce their long commitments on the theory that the recent sharp upturn had pretty well discounted the extent of damage to the crop. Coarse grains also were down about a cent a bushel on the average, with July corn losing 1½ cents. Cotton moved slightly higher at the opening, but later dipped below Saturday's prices on light offerings.

Trading Exchanges Extremely Dull.

"Leading European exchanges, including the allied rates, fluctuated idly around last week's final levels in today's trading in the foreign exchange market. Sterling, francs and Belgian francs were modestly higher. Scandinavian rates continued the advance which has been in progress recently, Danish kroner mounting almost ½ cent and the Norwegian currency about ½ cent to new tops for the movement. Several of the South American exchanges also were sharply higher, notably Brazilian and Chilean exchange.

CHICAGO, July 20.—Shares of Balaban [& Katz], a moving picture theater company, scored a sensational advance today on the Chicago exchange. Principal and interest payable in New York City at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., in United States gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness, without deduction for any Australian taxes, present or future.

The following statement in connection with this issue has been prepared from information furnished by the Right Honourable Sir Joseph Cook, P. C., G. C. M. G., the High Commissioner for the Commonwealth of Australia in London:

GENERAL — The Commonwealth of Australia is comparable with the Dominion of Canada in area, resources and importance to the British Empire.

This is the first external loan which the Commonwealth has issued outside of the London market, where its securities enjoy the highest credit. Loans of the Commonwealth issued in London constitute a legal investment for Trustees in Great Britain.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE — Through the issuance of this Loan, of a £5,000,000 loan in London, and of a long-term conversion loan to be issued in Australia, the Commonwealth is providing for the refunding of short-term war debt which matures in December 1925.

GOVERNMENT DEBT — The total gross debt of the Commonwealth as of March 31, 1925 amounted to $2,101,759,763, consisting of $282,351,498 external debt in the hands of the public (payable in London); $428,726,995 debt to the British Government (to be amortized by 1956 under a funding agreement of 1921); and $1,390,681,271 internal debt.

The foregoing represents the entire indebtedness of the Commonwealth as it has no guarantees outstanding.

REVENUES AND EXPENDITURES — The ordinary revenues of the Commonwealth in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1925 (partly estimated) amounted to $334,800,000, and its ordinary expenditures to $325,200,000, resulting in a surplus of $9,600,000. These figures do not include expenditures for public works or for certain non-recurrent charges consequent upon the war, amounting to approximately $40,300,000.

MONETARY SYSTEM — The monetary unit of Australia is the pound sterling, the gold standard having been restored on April 28, 1925, co-incidently with similar action in Great Britain, by the removal of restrictions on the export of gold. The Commonwealth Bank has the sole power of note-issue and on April 30, 1925 had $276,856,285 of notes in circulation, against which it held a gold reserve of $124,979,287, or over 45%.

COTTON PRICES REACT AFTER HIGHER START

NEW YORK, July 20.—Following the lead of Liverpool, the local cotton market opening firm and 8 to 14 points higher today with an early demand from shorts, Liverpool, New Orleans and commission houses. Sentiment for a time appeared to be quite bullish over the absence of any Sunday rain in the Southwest, together with a number of unfavorable crop reports from that section, but offerings subsequently increased on the suggestion of local weather map readers that barometer lines indicated possible showers in Texas.

Prices reacted from their early high points. October declined from 24.12c to 23.89c and January from 23.65c to 23.43c.

Several private condition reports were issued with conditions ranging from 74 to 73.3 and indicated yields around 14,300,000 bales. The average of the private reports thus far issued indicated a crop of approximately 14,139,000 bales.

Towards midday, the decline was carried down to 23.80c for October, and 23.40c for January, representing net losses of 9 to 12 points, followed by moderate reactions on failure of the official forecast to indicate rain which had been suggested for Texas earlier in the forenoon by local traders. Private reports from Texas continued to complain about weather conditions, but advices from Eastern belts were better.

The early afternoon market was dull, but continued steady in view of the Texas drouth and heat news. Prices were back to Saturday's closing level and up 9 to 12 points from the bottom of the day.

First Louisiana Cotton Bale.

NEW ORLEANS, July 20.—The first bale of Louisiana grown cotton for this season arrived here today, earlier in the season than at any time since 1886. It was grown by Joseph Daves of Florie, Sabine Parish, and will be auctioned off at the New Orleans Cotton Exchange.

Chicago Cotton Market.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 20.—Cotton closed unchanged on July, but 5 to 9 points net higher on new crop months. American markets made only a moderate response to Liverpool cables which came about 10 points higher than due. After showing a little strength at the opening prices soon turned weaker on light trading, but rallied near the close. No rains of consequence occurred over the week-end in Texas and Oklahoma and temperatures averaged 102 to 104 in those states. Concensus of private reports indicated condition between 73 and 74 per cent of normal with prospective yield slightly over 14,000,000 bales. The close: July 23.75; October 23.43; Dec., 23.58; Jan., 23.64; March, 23.85.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The raw sugar market was quiet early today, with prices unchanged at $4.27, duty paid. Price changes in raw sugar futures were narrow and dealings were light. Prices at midday showed declines of one point under liquidation by commission houses. Only moderate business was reported in refined sugar, with prices unchanged at $5.35 to $5.45 for fine granulated.

France's New Gold Loan Subscriptions Very Satisfactory.

PARIS, July 20.—Subscriptions to France's new gold coupon loan open today in a way described by Finance Minister Caillaux as very satisfactory. The loan is to absorb maturing defense bonds and is guaranteed against depreciation of the franc. Only holders of defense bonds can subscribe to the new loan, by exchanging the old bonds.

The Ministry of Finance said the results of the first day's subscription show the new bonds are regarded as a "good buy" but no figures of the amount of subscription will be available for several days.

Boston Wool Market.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, July 20.—The raw wool markets opened the week here with a firm tone and a fair amount of business, despite evidences of unsettlement in London where some wool has been withdrawn from the auctions. The American Woolen Co. and other manufacturers have proposed to reduce wages. Wood dealers, it was said, believe lowered costs, passed along in price in productions, would stimulate business markedly.

Dry Goods Market Review.

NEW YORK, July 20.—Cotton goods markets were active today with prices showing a firm to stronger trend. The 64 by 60s were advanced an eighth of a cent to 9⅝c. The 68 by 72c were steady at 10½. Raw silks eased off 2½c to 5c in a slow market.

New York Silk Market.

London Wool Auction.

LONDON, July 20.—A good selection amounting to 12,818 bales was offered at the wool auction today. There was a fair demand for superior scoured merinos at recent values, but other grades were slow and in buyers favor.

STOCKS MIXED AT WEEK'S START ON EXCHANGE

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, July 20.—Hydraulic Brick preferred, National Candy common and Missouri Portland Cement led in the trading on the exchange today. Prices were mixed. The cement stock was lower. Candy sold higher. Brick preferred sold off.

IS SPANKING BARBAROUS?

By Lucy Lowell.

DOES the hairbrush become a cruel and dangerous instrument in the parental hand when it is applied to the seat of Johnny's trousers?

Is spanking barbarous?

I hear parents asking each other this question, some of them admitting ruefully that they are having no success in training their boys and girls without occasionally adding physical punishment to moral suasion.

At the convention of the International Council of Women in Washington not long ago famous women, some of them mothers and grandmothers, united in denouncing all forms of corporal punishment for children.

Mrs. Ogilvie-Gordon of England, first vice president of the council, said:

"A child can be deprived of little pleasures if it misbehaves, and once it realizes a parent must be obeyed it will cease to become a worry.

"By the time it is 4 years old the average baby will have a foundation of discipline which if continued will last through life."

But a young father, whose children, as I happen to know, are models of obedience and good temper, has this to say:

"There's a time when a spanking is the only sort of discipline a child understands. That is before it is old enough to comprehend reasoning, no matter how simple.

"A baby of 4 does not connect cause and effect. And about the only pleasures of which it might be deprived are the physical ones of eating or going out into the air and sunshine. And to take those would be to endanger its health."

I was visiting the other day in a cultured and progressive home where two little girls, aged 5 and 6, are being reared on the principle that spanking is barbarous. They are brilliant youngsters, beautiful and talented. But when their mother called them for their bath, this is what they shouted from the garden where they were playing:

"G'on, you dirty old pig!"

"But darlings," said the mother, with tears in her eyes, "you mustn't speak that way! Come in and let me tell you why you can't use such language!"

"Pig!" they shouted again in high glee.

"Sometimes," said the mother to me, "I fear that we're not using just the right method with them. That's a sample of the way they act all the time. I'm sure I hope they'll outgrow it."

I don't believe they'll outgrow it. And I do believe that a firm spanking, administered to each of them just once, would do wonders not only to correct their present conduct, but to safeguard their futures.

It does seem to me, however, that most spankings are not given intelligently and prayerfully for the welfare of the child so much as they are flung out to vent the anger of the parent.

These are unjust and dangerous, and, as Mrs. Ogilvie-Gordon said, a confession of ignorance.

Two eggs, 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1 cup white flour, 2 cups bran, 1½ cups milk, 3 teaspoons baking powder. Beat eggs, add sugar, salt and milk. Mix and sift flour and baking powder. Add bran to first mixture, then add flour. Mix well and beat in melted butter. Turn into buttered and floured muffin pans and bake 30 minutes in a hot oven. Whenever possible, use up left-over slices of bread for breakfast toast or French toast. Small pieces of bread and crumbs made in cutting can be used in bread crumb pancakes or bread puddings.

Potato Biscuits.

Add to the cold mashed potatoes about twice as much flour and the same number of teaspoons of baking powder as cups of flour, a little salt and enough milk to make a very stiff biscuit-like dough. Mold quickly into biscuit form and place in a greased pan. Bake as you would baking powder biscuit.

LOVE

BY THE AUTHOR OF ELIZABETH AND HER GERMAN GARDEN

CHAPTER 24.

MR. LAMBTON opened the gate for the ladies, and, with his Rector, stood aside. Mrs. Colquhoun was prepared to persuade Catherine to pass through first, but Catherine, in deep abstraction, and seeing an open gate in her path, passed through it without persuasion.

"Absent-minded," thought Mrs. Colquhoun, explaining this otherwise ruffling lapse from manners. "Ageing," she added, explaining the absent-mindedness; and there was something dragging about Catherine's walk which really did look rather old.

The others caught her up. "A penny, dear Mrs. Cumfrit," said Mrs. Colquhoun, rallying her, "for your thoughts."

They happened to be passing George's tomb—George, the unfailingly good, the unvaryingly kind, the steadfastly loving; George who had been so devoted to her, and never, never got tired of her—and Catherine, roused thus suddenly, said absently, "I miss George."

It spread a chill, this answer of hers. It was so unexpected. Mr. Lambton, though unaware of the cause, for he didn't know, being new in the parish, what George was being missed, felt the drop in the temperature and immediately dropped with it into silence. Neither Mrs. Colquhoun nor Stephen could think for a moment of anything to say. Poor Mr. Cumfrit had been dead 12 years, and to be missed out loud after 12 solid years of death seemed to them uncalled for. It put them in an awkward position. It was almost an expression of dissatisfaction with the present situation. And, in any case, after 12 years it was difficult to condole with reasonable freshness.

Something had to be done, however, if only because of Mr. Lambton; and Stephen spoke first.

"Ah," he said; and then because he couldn't think of anything else, said it again more thoughtfully. "Ah," said Stephen a second time.

And Mrs. Colquhoun, taking Catherine's arm and walking thus with her the rest of the way to the porch, said, "Dear Mrs. Cumfrit, I do so understand. Haven't I been through it all, too?"

"I can't think why I said that," said Catherine, looking first at her and then at Stephen, lost in surprise at herself, her cheeks flushed.

"So natural, so natural," Mrs. Colquhoun assured her; to which Stephen, desirous of doing his best, added, "Very proper."

Virginia looked at him with startled eyes. "Oh! Do you think so, Stephen? Why?" she asked, turning red; for how dreadful if her mother had felt, had noticed, that she and Stephen . . . yet why else should she suddenly begin to miss . . .

"Because she said so."

Virginia stood looking at Stephen, the comb with which she was combing out her long dark hair suspended. It wasn't natural to begin all over again missing her father. Her mother wouldn't have if she hadn't noticed . . . How dreadful! She would so much hate her to be hurt. Poor Mother. Yet, what could she do? Stephen and his peace and happiness did come first. Except that she couldn't imagine such expressions applied to either of them, she did feel as if she were between the devil and the deep sea.

"Do you think—do you suppose"—— she faltered.

"It is not, is it, my darling, altogether flattering to us," said Stephen.

"Oh, Stephen—yes—I know you've done all you could—you've been wonderful"——

She put down the comb and went across to him, and he enfolded her in his arms.

"I wish"—— she began.

"What do you wish, my beloved wife?" he asked, laying one hand, as if in blessing, on her head. "I hope it is something nice, for, you know, whatever it is you wish I shall be unable not to wish it, too."

She smiled, and sighed, and nestled close. "Darling Stephen," she murmured; and after a moment said with another sigh; "I wish Mother didn't miss Father."

"Yes," said Stephen. "Indeed, I wish it, too. But," he went on, stroking the long, lovely strands of her thick hair, "we must make allowances."

The next morning Catherine went to church for the last time—for when Stephen was in London and not there to invite her to accompany him, which he solemnly before each separate service did, there would be no more need to go—and for the last time mingled her psalms with Mrs. Colquhoun's.

The psalms at morning prayer were said, not sung, and she was in the middle of joining with Mrs. Colquhoun in asserting that it was better to trust in the Lord than to put any confidence in man, which at that moment she was very willing to believe, when she felt she was being stared at.

She looked up from her prayer book, but could see only a few backs, and, one on each side of the chancel, Stephen and Mr. Lambton tossing the verses backward and forward across to each other, as if they were a kind of holy ball. She went on with her psalm, but the feeling grew stronger, and at last, contrary to all decent practice, she turned round.

There was Christopher.

She stood gazing at him, her open prayer book in her hand, for such an appreciable moment that Mrs. Colquhoun had to say the next verse without her. "The same stone," said Mrs. Colquhoun very loud and distinctly and in a voice of remonstrance—for, really, what had come over Virginia's mother, turning her back on the altar in this manner?—"which the builders refused is become the headstone of the corner." She had to say all the other verses without her, as well, and all subsequent responses, because Virginia's mother, though she presently resumed her proper eastward position, was thenceforth—such odd behavior—dumb.

Perhaps she was not feeling well. She certainly looked pale, or rather, yellow, thought Mrs. Colquhoun, observing her during the reading of the first lesson, through which she sat with downcast eyes and grew, so it seemed to Mrs. Colquhoun, steadily yellower.

"Dear Mrs. Cumfrit," whispered Mrs. Colquhoun at last, bending towards her, for she really did look sick, and it would be terrible if she—"would you like to go out?"

"Oh, no," was the quick, emphatic answer.

The service came to an end, it seemed to Catherine, in a flash. She hadn't had time to settle anything at all in her mind. She didn't in the least know what she was going to do. How had he found her? Had Mrs. Mitcham betrayed her? After her orders, her strict, exact orders? Was everybody failing her, even Mrs. Mitcham? How dared he follow her? It was persecution. And what was she to do, what was she to do, if he behaved badly, if he showed any of his idiotic, his mad feelings?

She knelt so long after the benediction that Mrs. Colquhoun began to fidget. Mrs. Colquhoun couldn't get out. She was hemmed into the pew by the kneeling figure. The few worshipers went away, and still Virginia's mother—really most odd—knelt. The outer door of the vestry was banged to, which meant Stephen and Mr. Lambton had gone, and still she knelt. The verger came down the aisle with his keys jingling to lock up, and still she knelt. "This" thought Mrs. Colquhoun at last, vexed by such a prolonged and ill-timed devoutness, "is ostentation," and she touched Catherine's elbow. "Dear Mrs. Cumfrit"—— she reminded her.

Catherine got up, very pale. The moment had come when she must turn and face Christopher. But the church was empty. No one was in it except the verger, waiting down by the door with his keys and looking patient. If only Christopher had gone right away—if only something in the service had touched him and made him see he was behaving outrageously, and he had gone right away. . . .

The porch, too, was empty. Perhaps he had really gone. Perhaps—she almost began to hope he had never been there, that she had imagined him.

She walked slowly beside Mrs. Colquhoun along the path to the churchyard gate. Stephen had hurried off to a sick bed, Mr. Lambton had withdrawn to his lodgings to prepare his Sunday sermons.

"I'm afraid you felt unwell in church," said Mrs. Colquhoun, suiting her steps to Catherine's, which were small and slow, which, in fact, dragged.

"I have rather a headache today," said Catherine, in a voice that trailed away into indistinctness, for, on turning a bend in the path, there, once more, was Christopher.

He was examining George's tomb.

Mrs. Colquhoun saw him at the same moment, and her attention was at once diverted from Catherine. Strangers were rare in that quiet corner of the world, and she scrutinized this one with keen, interested eyes. The young man in his leather motoring clothes pleased her, for not only was he a well-set-up young man, but he was reading poor Mr. Cumfrit's inscription bareheaded. So, in her opinion, should all hic jacet inscriptions be read. It showed, thought Mrs. Colquhoun, a rather delicate reverence not usually found in these wild scorchers of the road. If Mr. Cumfrit had been the Unknown Warrior himself his inscription couldn't have been read more respectfully.

She was pleased, and wondered complacently who the stranger could be; and almost before she had had time to wonder he turned from the tomb and came towards them.

"Why, he seems——" she began; for the young man was showing signs of recognition, his face was widening in greeting, and the next moment he was holding out his hand to her companion.

"How do you do," he said, with such warmth that she concluded he must be Mrs. Cumfrit's favorite nephew. She had never heard of any nephews, but most families have got some.

The newcomer, standing bareheaded in the sun, seemed red all over. His face was very red, and his hair glowed. She liked the look of him. Vigour—life—a relief after her bloodless companion.

"Introduce us," she said briskly, with the frankness she felt her age entitled her to when dealing with young folk of the other sex. "I am sure," she said heartily, holding out her hand in its sensible, loose-fitting wash-leather glove, "you are one of Mrs. Cumfrit's nephews and our dear Virginia's cousin."

"No, I'm dashed if I am," exclaimed the stranger. "I mean"—he turned an even more fiery red—"I'm not."

"Mr. Monckton," said Catherine, in a far-away voice.

"She doesn't tell you who I am," smiled Mrs. Colquhoun, gripping his hand, still pleased with him in spite of his exclamation, for she liked young men, and there existed, besides, a tradition that she got on well with them and knew how to manage them. "Have you noticed that people who introduce hardly ever do so completely? I'm the other mother-in-law."

A faint hope began to flutter in Catherine's heart. Christopher had the appearance of one who doesn't know what to say next. She had never known him not know that before. If Mrs. Colquhoun could reduce him to silence, she might yet get through the next few minutes not too discreditably.

"Mrs. Cumfrit and I," explained Mrs. Colquhoun, putting her arm through Catherine's, as though elucidating her, "are both the mothers-in-law of the same delightful couple—I of her daughter, she of my son. We are linked together, she and I, in indissoluble bonds."

Christopher wished to slay her as she stood. The liberal days were past, however, when one could behave simply, and as he couldn't behave simply and slay her, he didn't know how to behave to her at all.

"The woman has a beak," he thought, standing red and tongue-tied before her. "She's a bird of prey. She has got her talons into my Catherine. Linked together! Good God!"

Convention preventing his saying this out loud or any of the other things he was feeling, he turned in silence and walked with them, on the other side of Catherine, towards the gate.

IS A SCREAMING WIFE A HUSBAND'S TORMENT?

By WINIFRED BLACK

"LADIES if you feel like screaming—scream," says Mr. Rupert Hughes, the novelist and student of women.

Thanks awfully, dear Doctor Hughes, for your diagnosis and for your remedy.

Only you ought to make it perfectly plain that the screaming must be done when your friends and relatives are where they can't hear you.

It's fun to scream, and there is no relief in the world like a good hard cry, but relatives have a way of remembering and even husbands don't forget as frequently as they might. And that is sometimes awkward.

I have known a cold-hearted mother-in-law to go on the witness stand and swear that her daughter-in-law was crazy because the daughter-in-law "screamed her head off"—to use Mr. Hughes' delightful expression. The jury believed the mother-in-law and shut the woman who screamed up in an asylum. She is there yet and her husband is married to a quiet little person who never screamed in her life and never thought about anybody or anything but herself and her own best fortune in her life either.

Now as for me, if I were a man I don't think I'd take a screamer to go through life with me, but if I had to choose between her and a dull little matter-of-fact practical person who never feels like screaming, or like laughing either for that matter, I'd choose the screamer myself.

A screamer might have her moments of attraction and interest. The other sort is sure to be a bore from beginning to end.

And one thing about Mr. Hughes and his doctrine concerning screams, is this. He told it all to us without using the overworked word "psychology" once, not even once.

And for that relief, I move we give him a rising vote of thanks.

Children's Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Peter Rabbit's Jumping Cousin

Lead in something. What it be Matters not that I can see.
—Jack Rabbit.

PETER RABBIT pricked up his ears when Digger the Badger said that he had seen Peter's cousin, Jack, out in the Far West where he had come from. Peter was all curiosity at once. Digger had exclaimed, "How that fellow can jump!" Now Peter thinks he is a pretty good jumper himself, and he is at once always interested in any one who jumps. In his own mind, Peter had long been quite certain that his big cousin, Jumper the Hare, was the greatest jumper for his size in all the Great World excepting Timmy the Flying Squirrel. He didn't consider that the latter counted anyway, for he always has to climb a tree before making one of his famous jumps. Of the peoples who jumped on the ground Peter was sure that his big cousin, Jumper the Hare, couldn't be equaled.

"You ought to see Jumper the Hare, who lives in the Green Forest jump," said Peter.

"I have seen him jump," replied Digger. "He is a very good jumper, but his Cousin Jack out there in the Far West would laugh at him."

"I don't believe it," replied Peter.

"Your honesty must excuse your impoliteness," said Digger. "I am not in the habit of being told that I am not believed."

"I beg your pardon," said Peter hastily. "It slipped out before I thought. I am sorry. Truly I am, Mr. Badger. Of course, if you say that Cousin Jack is a better jumper than Cousin Jumper, it must be so. It is hard to believe, that is all. What does Cousin Jack look like?"

"Oh," replied Digger, "he looks like the rest of the family only he has longer legs and longer ears. Jumper the Hare's ears are short compared with the ears of the Jack Rabbit."

"Really?" exclaimed Peter.

"Really," replied Digger. "And his legs, both his front legs and his hind legs, are much longer. That is why he can jump so. You ought to see that fellow start off in a hurry. He makes his jump way up in the air to look around, and then it seems as if he hardly touched the ground. He can jump about twice as far as Jumper the Hare. That is because his legs are so much longer. It is a lucky thing for him that he can jump that way, for goodness knows he has enemies enough out there."

"Does he dig holes in the ground?" asked Peter.

"Didn't I tell you that he is really a Hare and not a Rabbit at all?" asked Digger. "You know, or you ought to know, that Hares live on the ground and not in the ground. Jack Rabbit trusts to his long legs in times of danger. He has no use for a hole in the ground. Wolves and coyotes and hawks and eagles and owls are all the time hunting for Jack Rabbit and he has to be everlastingly on the watch. But after they have tried it once or twice they don't spend much time chasing him; he is too fast. They depend more on catching him by surprise."

"Is he much hunted by those two-legged creatures called men?" inquired Peter.

"Indeed he is," declared Digger. "I don't know of anyone who is hunted any more. That's because Jack is forever getting into mischief. He is worse than you are. They hunt him out there with the fastest dogs you ever saw. Those dogs don't hunt him with their noses the way Bowser the Hound hunts you, they hunt him by sight and try to run him down. You never in your life have seen such running as when one of those dogs gets after your cousin Jack. My, it's exciting. Well, I guess I've talked long enough. Come see me again some time, Peter." With this Digger the Badger waddled away.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Clean, but Unstarched.

Never put clothes away unless absolutely clean. But do not starch the cotton clothes, as the starch will cause the material to rot.

* * *

Professional Buttonholes.

The tailor makes the length of the buttonhole to be worked with beeswax, which holds the cut threads together. Ordinary soap will do almost as well for home work.

* * *

Purchasing Woolens.

Avoid buying woolen materials having a series of holes along the selvedges. This usually means the fabric has been stretched and is therefore likely to shrink when washed.

* * *

Carrying a Cake.

If an iced cake must be wrapped and carried, stick a few toothpicks into the icing and adjust the paper carefully over these small stilts. They will keep the paper from touching the icing and there will be no trouble about the icing sticking to the paper when it is removed.

Coffee Jelly Creams.

TAKE a quarter of a pound of nut filled coffee cream bonbons and chop them coarsely, then fold them into a cupful of whipped cream that has been sweetened and flavored with a few drops of vanilla. Set to chill. Make a cupful of very strong coffee, then strain it into a pint and a half of boiling water. Melt a heaping tablespoonful of powdered gelatine, in a little of the hot water. Add it to the rest of the water and the coffee and allow it to come just to the boiling point, strain it into a bowl to cool. Before straining add a cupful of sugar and when melted strain. When cold, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and pour a little into the bottom of six individual wet molds. Let set for a few minutes in a cool place, then place a heaping tablespoonful of the cream mixture in each cup. Turn in enough of the cold liquid jelly, to cover and set to chill. When ready to serve unmold and garnish with a little whipped cream on top of each.

MEDITATIONS —OF A— MARRIED WOMAN

By HELEN ROWLAND

FITS AND MISFITS.

NOWADAYS a man must be either an acrobat to disentangle himself from one love affair after another, or a skilled juggler to keep several going at one time.

* * *

Some husbands act so much like "guests" in the house that the family heaves a sigh of relief when they go out and everybody can be natural.

* * *

Most men have delicatessen hearts in which they keep just a little bit of everything, from sweet-pickled sentiment to canned ideals, denatured romance and pre-digested emotions.

* * *

* * *

* * *

Alas, on the journey of love a man never puts out his hand to signal warning to a girl when he is going to take a sudden turn.

* * *

Somehow, the fashion of offering to shoulder a woman's burdens for life seems to have gone out among men, along with the wearing of suspenders.

* * *

By the time a man has ceased to be wary of a woman, he has usually commenced to be weary of her, and the moment she ceases to be "dangerous" she becomes just a little bit "tiresome."

* * *

Love is the light on the canvas of life. Without it the most brilliant career is flat, dull and uninteresting.

What Becomes of a "Stepping-Out" Sister?

By WINIFRED BLACK

HER sisters are worried about her—terribly worried.

She's handsome, she's rather clever and, dear me, what pretty clothes she wears and how well she knows how to wear them.

And she isn't as young as she used to be, her sister says.

"Grace is 27 now," said the sister, "and I thought she would be married and settled by the time she was 23. She always had dozens of beaus and she could have married half a dozen times within the past five years.

"But you see, she went into the city to work. She said she was bored to death here in the country, in this little town, so she got a job. It sounded like a pretty good job to me, too, for a girl like Grace, without any great business training. But she soon got tired of it and changed to something else.

"And then she quickly changed again to something else, and now she is always changing and never satisfied. She goes out such a lot; almost every night. She goes "stepping," as she calls it, to dinner at some cafe and dancing afterwards and she gets home so late. She is tired and doesnt want to get up in the morning, and then they quarrel with her at the office and out she walks.

"She has a real sweetheart out here—a nice fellow he is, too—he is crazy about her and I think she is really fond of him. But he is just her age and the older men she knows have spoiled her. She wants pretty clothes and jewelry and lots of good times and she says Jim would expect her to settle down and economize and have a family of children and wash her own dishes and sweep off her own porch and mend Jim's socks and count his clothes for the laundry and wear made-over dresses and shabby gloves and shoes that are not quite the latest things and she just can't bear the thought of it.

"And I don't see what's going to become of her. Lots of these men she goes to parties with live somewhere else. They are just in town for a few days and take her out for a good time, and I just know that some of them are married. One of them sent her a beautiful bracelet from Seattle the other day. I wish she wouldn't take it, but she says she isn't quite sure who sent it and it really is such a beauty."

Or does she ever think at all—I wonder.

Will the day ever come when she will wish she had married Jim and settled down, even if she did have to wear a pair of shabby gloves once in a while and a hat that wasn't quite the smartest thing in town? What do you think about it, girls?

Wow Wow Sauce

HAVE ready some chopped parsley and either two or three cucumber pickles or walnuts, cut into small pieces. Melt a quarter cupful of butter and stir in one tablespoonful of flour and about one cup of broth. (If the sauce is for boiled meat use the liquid in which meat is cooked, the bouillon cubes may also be used.) Add one tablespoon vinegar, one tablespoon mushroom ketchup and one teaspoon made mustard. Simmer until it becomes of a creamy consistency, then add the parsley and pickles and heat it. When served with boiled beef, some cooks strew diced turnips and carrots over the meat and pour the sauce over this. With veal they strew minced capers or walnuts over the meat before adding the sauce.

THE erstwhile famous Boston Sox
Are hopelessly upon the rocks,
So much so that their playing shocks
Our fine artistic senses.
When some one hits an easy pop
That any 10-year-old could cop
The fielders stand and watch it drop
And other crude offenses.

The former champions once so proud,
Are guyed and hooted by the crowd,
And, it appears that to their cloud
There is no silver lining.
But, every day in every way
The rooters here enjoyed their stay,
For Sisler's boys were making hay
While Sol was brightly shining.

The interest in the Scopes defense
Is daily growing more intense,
And, to the law and evidence,
The issue now will narrow,
For, the defense's strongest card,
Bacilli experts, have been barred,
Which makes the going rather hard
For Dud Malone and Darrow.

While experts on the human race
Are fine and dandy in their place,
It seems that in the present case,
The court denies their fitness.
And anybody will agree
That, whether with or sans a fee,
The criminal lawyer is at sea
Without his expert witness.

BOY'S WORRY OVER THEFT FROM DAD ENDS TRAGICALLY

He Was Given Two Aspirin Tablets by Grandmother to Induce Sleep, Then Took Six More.

HOME REMEDIES FAIL TO SAVE LIFE

Jesse Mallory, 13-year-old schoolboy, confessed to his grandmother, with whom he and his father live at 1005 South Sixth street, how he had taken a ten-dollar bill which his father had placed on a bedroom mantel, and had gone forth with a playmate for a revel of boyhood spending.

Contritely, he told the story to his grandmother, Mrs. Hattie Mallory, just before bedtime, last evening; how he had shared three dollars with his playmate, how they spent Sunday at picture shows, munching sweets, until the money spent and sick from overeating, he had returned home. Would he be punished by his father? Would he be punished in the hereafter? He believed he would kill himself.

Gave Him Two Tablets.

To all this the grandmother told him to "hush such foolishness" and go to bed. He had told the truth like a good boy, she would take up the matter with his father. The boy went to bed, but shortly appeared saying he couldn't sleep. Then, Mrs. Mallory related today, she gave the boy two aspirin tablets, and he returned to bed. But shortly he reappeared saying, "I've taken six more of the tablets and I'm getting sick."

Mrs. Mallory endeavored to apply home remedies, at the same time dispatching a neighbor to a nearby picture show to notify his father. When the latter arrived in a few minutes the boy was in convulsions. He was rushed in an ambulance to the city hospital where doctors pronounced him dead.

"Jesse was a bright boy," the grandmother said today, "and I thought what he was saying was only his imagination. His father suspected he had taken the money, but he said nothing to him. He left that to me. When I talked to Jesse about it, he denied it at first, and then later told me all about it. He said he had taken some other little things, such as a red bandana handkerchief off a clothes line. He had given it away to some other boy.

Autopsy to Be Held.

"Then he commenced to talk about heaven and such, and I told him to forget such things and go to bed. He hadn't eaten anything all day, and was sick. He needed sleep and rest, and that's why I gave him the two aspirin tablets."

The boy's father, Roy Mallory, a laborer, is separated from the boy's mother, whose whereabouts are not known to the family. An autopsy will be held in an effort to fix the exact cause of death, and an inquest will be held tomorrow.

A chemical analysis also will be made of some of the aspirin tablets and of samples of some candy

WILLED $30,000 FOR ADVICE

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 21.—Because Mrs. Wilda E. Kesseling, while connected with a bank in Columbus, O., gave Mrs. Anna L. Richardson some advice that saved her from being swindled, she will receive Mrs. Richardson's entire estate, valued at $30,000.

Mrs. Richardson recently died intestate, but just as the Public Administrator was about to obtain an order escheating the estate to the Commonwealth, Mrs. Kesseling produced a letter in which Mrs. Richardson thanked her for the sound advice given in Columbus and expressed the intention of bequeathing her all her property. Yesterday this letter was admitted to probate as a will.
